EVERETT NEWSWANGER

Universities Join Forces To Heighten Swine Industry Environmental Awareness

University of Pennsylvania

The sustainability of swine production into the next century depends on the ability of the industry to work in an accordance with the environment. Nutrient management practices are needed that are both cost-effective for the producer and beneficial to the environment creating a win-win situation. Possible short term gains from progressive nutrient management strategies include reducing fertilizer costs and improving soil attributes. Longer term benefits will come from improved consumer confidence in pork products and increased market share as the public becomes aware of the progressive strategies that swine producers are utilizing to help the environment.

A producer can become easily overwhelmed by attempting to keep current on complex, environmental regulations and newly emerging research. How can a producer avoid becoming lost in the seemingly endless abyss? The National Pork Producer's Council is sponsoring the Environmental Assurance Program which nicely compiles the information about best management practices, regulations, odor reduction, and community relations. This program is designed to allow the producer to take what was learned and tailor it the needs of their operation.

With the assistance of the Environmental Assurance Program, the collaboration among Penn State University's Department of Dairy and Animal Science, Cooperative Extension, and the University of Pennsylvania's Center for Animal Health and Productivity located at the School of Veterinary Medicine represents a combined effort to both heighten the Pennsylvania swine producers awareness of the environmental issue and begin to develop innovative nutrient management strategies for the 21st Century. Working from an education standpoint, Dr. Ken Kephart from Penn State University's Department of Dairy and

Secretary Hayes Promises PDA Support For Ag Ed

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — State Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr. on Monday told a group of about 70 participants in a five-state agricultural education conference at the Milton Hershey School's Founders' Hall that he was willing to dedicate the services of the state Department of Agriculture and himself in helping to promote and enhance agricultural education in the state and nation.

But he told them that they must be the ones to develop public support for agricultural education and it must be done school district by school district.

Hayes said the key to whether or not agricultural education is or isn't in Pennsylvania comes down to five votes — every school board in the state can approve or disapprove programs on a majority

NE Chicken Pts 1&2

AUGUST 6, 1997

Trucklot buying activity was mixed with buyer resistance noted at higher asking prices. Offerings were irregularly available and held with varying degrees of confidence. Movement through both retail and distributive channels was generally good although some dealers reported a noticeable tapering of business. The market tone was mostly steady with an underlying cautious trade sentiment more apparent.

#1 in Rumen Availability
Pennfield's Super Flaked Corn™

THE PROCESS INVOLVES

1) Cleaning the corn
2) Soaking or steeping the corn for a prescribed period of time
3) Applying steam to the corn before rolling
4) The specially conditioned corn is then rolled between 2 large rollers
5) The wet flat rolled corn is then processed by a special unit that removes the moisture and dries the finished flake back down to normal corn moisture
6) The finished product resembles a bright yellow corn flake (makes you want to get a bowl full and add milk and sugar)

WHY IS SUPER FLAKED CORN BETTER?

Flat rolled steam flaking disrupts the cellular structure of the corn kernels (gelatinization) and increases sites for microbial attachments resulting in improved starch (carbohydrate) digestion in the rumen. In simple terms, the cow uses more of the nutrients because the rumen bugs can get to them and much less corn nutrient goes out in the manure.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
AUGUST 6, 1997

Grain and soybean bids jumped sharply higher due to improved export interest and dry weather concerns. The 5 day forecast for the Midwest has lessened the possibility for rainfall over the weekend adding support to corn and bean bids. Some fund buying was noted in wheat pits. Soybean meal and oil bids moved higher, helping to minimize damage to crush margins. Wheat 7 to 10 cents higher. Corn 3 to 5 cents higher. Sorghum 3 to 8 cents higher. Soybeans 3 to 25 cents higher. The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

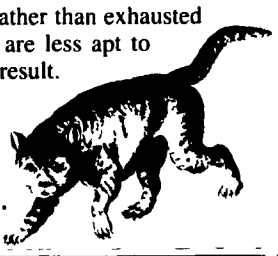
AUGUST 11-17, 1997

DOG DAYS END, AUG. 11.

CAT NIGHTS BEGIN

This week begins with the last day of Dog Days, those hot, sultry summer days when you can't beat the heat, and ends on August 17 with the commencement of Cat Nights, those long, yowly, cat-on-the-fence evenings for tomcatting and tomfoolery. The second day of Cat Nights, August 18, is also the full Moon, when tomcatting is reputed to be at its most successful. Carousers will be refreshed rather than exhausted by their exertions then, and are less apt to suffer physical maladies as a result.



The cats that drive the mice away are as good as they that catch them.

– German proverb

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Watch for the fast Perseid meteor showers, with their glowing trails, before dawn on the night of August 11-12.

TOMATO BEAN GAZPACHO

- 2 large tomatoes, cored, seeded, and chopped
- 1 large cucumber, peeled, seeded, and chopped
- 1 large yellow pepper, seeded and chopped
- 1 medium Spanish onion, chopped
- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- 32 ounces spicy vegetable cocktail juice
- 1/3 cup red wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon chili powder
- 1 16-ounce can small white beans, rinsed and drained
- 3 tablespoons chopped cilantro

In a blender, puree half the chopped vegetables, 2 cloves garlic, and half the vegetable juice. Cover the remaining chopped vegetables and refrigerate. Pour the puree into a bowl and add the remaining garlic and vegetable juice, and the vinegar, oil, salt, and chili powder. Cover and refrigerate for 1 hour. Just before serving, combine puree, chopped vegetables, and beans. Garnish with cilantro.

Makes 5 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If the shores of streams are frothy, it will rain soon.

If the ants are throwing up tiny heaps of sand, count on a fair day.

If the pigs carry straw in their mouths, figure on high winds.

OPINION

Ag Progress Days Are For Everyone Who Eats

If you produce food or eat it, you will find something of interest at Ag Progress Days to be held this week at Penn State's Russell E. Larson research farm. From the hands-on experience of driving various models and makes of tractors to petting an insect, you will have fun at Ag Progress Days.

But the most important reason to attend is to be a part of the future of agriculture. Some farmers choose to go the "route of less." They want to use fewer chemicals and minimum tillage. They want to graze their livestock. Ag Progress Days features research projects and practical exhibits to help this kind of farmer.

Other farmers thrive on the "high-tech route." Computers in the milking parlor, the farm office, or on tractors and combines captures the attention of this breed of farmer. Ag Progress Days has many programs and equipment features of interest.

How often do you get to ask the most knowledgeable ag college professor available about your interest in his or her subject? This also is possible at Ag Progress Days.

So load up the family in the pick-up truck, or get several neighbors together and make the trip to Ag Progress Days. You will see your friends there too.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Manage Alfalfa Fields

Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, reports that he has seen many alfalfa fields looking extremely bad. The dry weather did not allow the alfalfa to grow very tall However, the biggest problem is the potato leafhopper which is feeding heavily on alfalfa When the leafhopper feeds it injects a toxin into the alfalfa plant that plugs the plant'svascular system. This stops the flow of water and nutrients within the plant. Fields where the leafhopper have been controlled are short but green in color. Once an alfalfa field shows signs of leafhopper feeding it must be mowed to get the plant functioning again. Fields that are showing yellowing or "leafhopper burn" need to be mowed and then sprayed with an insecticide. If the field has begun to bloom, it will not add height, it will only loose feeding value. These fields should be harvested immediately. If the alfalfa is too short to bale, it should be clipped and the stubble sprayed for leafhoppers

To Harvest Silage to Optimize Quantity and Quality

Even with recent rains, this summer's drought may have lasted too long to expect great things of corn and other crops, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent. The decision to harvest silage should reflect 1. the potential the field has for recovery, 2. the moisture content of the crop and 3. any yield losses which could be expected due to the loss of lower leaves. As we get later into the growing season, the likelihood of yield increases due to late season rains diminishes rapidly.

Corn and other plants quickly looses its ability to maintain leaves. Drought stress causes a high rate of abortion of kernels furtner limiting plants ability to recover from drought. Consider harvesting drought crops as soon as the moisture content of the whole plant is in the range of good storage.

To Be Aware of Silo Gases

A dry season, like we are having, increase the danger of silo gas. This deadly gas from fermenting forage can make filling silos particularly dangerous during dry weather, according to Penn State safety specialist, Dr. Dennis Murphy. Silo gas or nitrogen dioxide can cause severe irritation to the nose and throat and may lead to an inflammation of the lungs. It can cause unconsciousness or death especially in the first 12 to 72 hours after filling the silo Silo gas is heavier than air It tends to accumulate just above the silage in the silo. It has a strong bleach like odor and appears as a low lying yellow, red or dark brown gas The gas may flow down thechute and collect in the feed room or other areas near the base of the silo. To prevent silo gas poisoning, provide good ventilation in and around the silo when silage is fermenting. Keep the door between the barn and feed room and silo closed Keep children out of the area.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote "There is little difference in people, but that little difference makes a big difference. That little difference is attitude. The big difference is whether it is positive or negative."

Editor:

I have been comparing prices and statistics from our market administrator report, from last year to now, and I see why our price is still so low.

In the four classes of milk that they divide our production, the percent always changes depending how much the price in the class increases.

That is why we are getting less money this year, than last.

Last year in June the UNIFORM PRICE (U.P.) $15.18 today it is $12.74, this shows me that they are using all the classes of milk to their advantage.

As it says in this report "A sudden drop in dairy product sales and a sharp buildup in stocks dropped cheese and butter prices dramatically in April. In late May, butter prices regained most of their earlier loss, but cheese has yet to show much recovery. Once the current excess stocks are worked off and production declines seasonally, prices are expected to raise substantially and, perhaps, QUICKLY.

Don't you guys get it yet????

They want us to make more milk for them so they can play with the milk we produce and

A MUTUAL-STIRRING SOCIETY

August 10, 1997

Background Scripture:
Hebrews 10:19-39
Devotional Reading:
1 Corinthians 1:1-10

Is your church a mutual-stirring society?

Since retiring from the staff of the First United Methodist Church in Dallas, TX where I served the last 13 years of my ministry, I have taken the opportunity to attend a variety of churches and denominations. All too often, my wife and I did not find very stirring experiences. Some of these services seem to be planned so that no one runs the risk of being stirred to do anything — including coming back the following Sunday.

Among the 20 definitions of the word stir in my dictionary I found: "to rouse from inactivity, quiet contentment, indifference, etc.;" "to incite, instigate or prompt;" "to affect strongly; excite;" "to be emotionally moved or strongly affected;" and even "a jog, poke or thrust."

I know that sometimes being stirred — or not — is in the eye of the beholder and being stirred is not all there is to a service of worship. Still, it seems to me that a worship service that does not stir us in some way is not likely to motivate us to live as followers of Jesus Christ.

LOVE AND GOOD WORKS

The writer of Hebrews thinks so: "let us consider how to stir up one another to love and good works..." (10:24). As followers of Jesus we have a responsibility, not only to live fruitful, loving lives, but also to motivate others to do the same.

There have been many times when I have walked into a beautiful cathedral and been inspired by what I found there. But that is a very limited experience and spiritually not all that the Church is meant to be. Our experience of God, whether in a cathedral, shrine, outdoor setting or the privacy of our own room, is meant to be helpful to others as well as ourselves. We are intended by God to be a fellowship in which we inspire each other to live more faithfully as disciples of Christ. In other words: a mutual-stirring society.

Research indicates that, on the average, women are better able to survive the loss of a mate than men. The reason? Women tend to have more supportive relationships than men. Twenty years ago when we did our research for a book on breast cancer (You CAN Save Your Breast, Valere & Larry Althouse, W.W. Norton), we found that studies indicated that breast cancer victims who joined the support groups recuperated faster from surgery and radiation and with fewer and less severe complications. Alcoholics Anonymous has demonstrated admirable success as a healing support group for alcoholics. As one who has conducted grief support groups, I have observed very often that the bereaved are often helped most by those who have experienced grief themselves. In life, all of us are wounded healers.

SPIRITUAL SUPPORT GROUP

The church is called to be a vital support group for all of us who are committed to living as disciples of Jesus. So, it is to be measured not solely by what we can get out of it, but also by what we can put into it. We need to find support there to help us in our daily living and we need to give support to our fellow disciples. The writer of Hebrews warns against "neglecting to meet together, as is the habit of some, but encouraging one another" (10:25). Neglecting to meet together as a church deprives us and others of support that is so vital to our lives. Often the greatest gift we can offer someone else is encouragement.

G. Ernest Thomas tells of a preacher in a village in Scotland who went to the home of one of his members. This member had recently declared to his friends that he did not have to go to church on the Sabbath because he could find God just as well in his garden or in the fields. The minister and parishioner sat in silence before a fireplace. After a while, the preacher arose and, taking the tongs from the fireplace, lifted a single coal from the embers and placed it alone on the hearth. Soon the coal burned into a black ash while the fire continued to burn brightly. Then he went quietly back to his chair. In time the parishioner said, "I know what you mean, I cannot live alone. Next Sunday I'll be at my place in the church."

Bureau Provides A.I. Update

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — While the industry continues to lobby USDA for the use of an avian influenza (A.I.) vaccine, there is still resistance to its use because of the risk to the export market, noted Dr. Phil Debok, chief of the animal health division of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Animal Health.

The use of a vaccine, Debok told Lancaster Farming Friday morning, "could jeopardize a significant amount of exports. It could significantly affect the export markets, particularly the meat birds, to Russia, China, and the European Union."

The widespread use of the vaccine could create an embargo of U.S. meat poultry products, particularly to the European Union, noted Debok. It could be likely for Russia and China to follow suit.

Debok noted that the it's possible that, nationally, the broiler industry may not be in favor of the immediate use of the vaccine in the low pathogenic state.

Two weeks ago the state ag department announced the avilability of some of the four million doses of the vaccine would be developed and used. Some doses wouldn't be available probably until the end of September or beginning of October this year, Debok indicated.

USDA continues to perform risk assessments on vaccine use. Another concern would be that the use of the vaccine would make identifying and tracking A.I. spread in flocks difficult.

The vaccine wouldn't be used unless A.I. in the Lancaster County quarantine zone would turn highly pathogenic and birds would be dying. But preemptive use of the vaccine could reduce or soften the impact of the virus in the low pathogenic state, before it could turn highly pathogenic.

Large Swine Club Creates Successful County Roundup

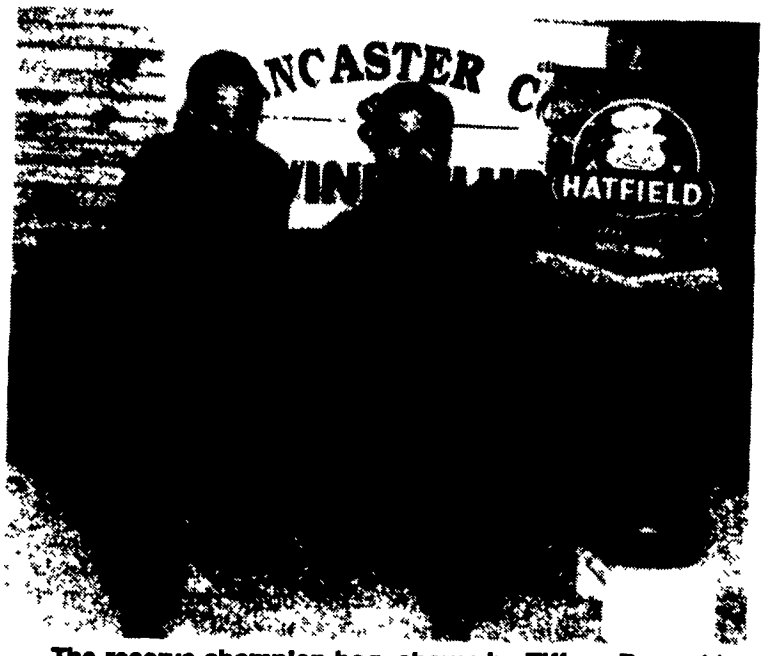
ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — It's easy to see why a county swine roundup can be so successful.

It's all in the numbers. For instance, Lancaster County 4-H swine members exceed 100. For the county roundup, 76 4-H exhibitors showed 164 head of swine, including 29 in the carcass show alone.

Those numbers have been impressing a lot of people for some time, and before the start of the swine roundup sale Wednesday evening at the Manheim Farm Show grounds, Chet Hughes, livestock agent, said the numbers prove that the county swine club "is one of the biggest 4-H swine clubs we've had in some time."

When the sawdust settled and the winners posed for photographs, the grand champion shown by Kevin Pfautz, 14, son of Rick and Sue Pfautz, Lititz, was purchased by Hatfield Quality Meats for $2 per pound. The 263-pound heavyweight champion brought in a check for $526.



The reserve champion hog, shown by Tiffany Dean, 11, daughter of Joan and Gary Dean, Strasburg, went for $1.75 per pound to Hatfield Quality Meats. The 242-pound brought a check for $423.50 for Tiffany. At right is Kurt Good, Hatfield representative.

The reserve, shown by Tiffany Dean, 11, daughter of Joan and Gary Dean, Strasburg, went for $1.75 per pound to Hatfield Quality Meats. The 242-pound brought a check for $423.50 for Tiffany.

The grand champion gilt shown by Kevin was a Hampshire/Duroc crossbred gilt. The homebred gilt was the result of "better genetics," said Kevin, who also took reserve champion showman. Kevin, a freshman at Warwick High School, obtained the semen from a commercial breed company in Illinois.

Kevin won reserve overall champion at the roundup before, but this was his first grand champion. He intends to show three hogs at Elizabethtown Fair, three at Ephrata Fair, three at the New Holland Farmers' Fair, two at the Manheim Farm Show, two at the Keystone International Livestock Expo, and one at state Farm Show.

Tiffany Dean, reserve champion, is in the fifth grade at Hans Herr Elementary School. This was her first champion at the roundup.

The Hampshire crossbred gilt, nicknamed "Spoiler" (from a Beany Baby stuffed animal), was bred by Ken Winebark, Myerstown.

She said that the hogs are run in a meadow every other night, for about a half mile, for exercise. She also attributes a hog championship to really good feed.

Tiffany intends to show two hogs at Solanco Fair, two at the West Lampeter Fair, and two at state Farm Show.

At the sale, the champion light heavyweight shown by Nathan Hoover, son of Lloyd and Elaine Hoover, Leola, went for 95 cents a pound to Ephrata National Bank. The champion lightweight shown by Sheldon Hoover, brother to Nathan, also went to Ephrata National Bank for 95 cents a pound.

The reserve champion heavyweight, shown by Gerald Boyd, son of Kerry and Deb Boyd and the champion showman at the roundup, went for 95 cents a pound to Stoltzfus Meats. The reserve champion light heavyweight, shown by Kevin Pfautz's sister, Lisa, went for 70 cents a pound to Hatfield Quality Meats. The reserve champion medium weight hog, shown by John Lentz of Manheim, went for 80 cents a pound to Hatfield, and the reserve champion lightweight, shown by Jonathan Good, son of Amos and Pat Good, Lititz, went for 90 cents a pound to Hatfield.

Prices with champions were an average of 85 cents per pound; without, 83 cents. Auctioneer was John Stauffer.

Judge for the show was Matt Parsons, a commercial swine breeder from Hadley, Mass.

Following is a list of show placings.

DHIA Technicians Hear Evans

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — "Be with the best, test with Pa. DHIA," was the motto of the recent Pa. DHIA technicians' summer conference held at the Ramada Inn in Altoona, July 11 and 12.

The highlight of the business side of the agenda was the presentation from the keynote speaker, Dr. Donald Evans, associate professor of agriculture and extension education at Penn State University.

Dr. Evans presented a challenge to the audience to live on the positive side of life. Through different experiences in his own life, Dr. Evans pointed out how important it is to always be thankful for the ability and technology that is so abundantly available.

Along with all of this, he presented a slide presentation on the many projects that he is involved in, such as educating extension personnel in other countries, such as Poland.

Following the motivational and informational presentation, the technicians listened to a sales and marketing panel moderated by Tom Smith, regional marketing manager for Pa. DHIA.

The panel consister of three technicians, two dairymen and one veterinarian. "Customer service" was the central theme of the panel, emphasizing what is expected from the technician in todays' dairy climate, as well as what tomorrow's computerized dairymen will expect.

The technicians also heard committee reports from the technicians' Advisory Committee and the technicians' Computer Committee. Staff reports were given along with reports from all the Pa. DHIA support staff.

Pa. DHIA is a farmer-owned cooperative that specializes in state of the art dairy farm management records currently serving over 3,500 members in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, West Virginia, Ohio and Missouri. Same-day test reports and milk urea nitrogen testing continues to be some of the most popular services provided by Pa. DHIA.

American Soybean Association Board Announces New Officers

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The board of directors for the American Soybean Association (ASA) announces the confirmation of David Erickson from Altona, Ill., as the association's new chairman, and Mark Berg from Tripp, S.D., as the association's new president.

The board also elected Mike Yost from Murdock, Minn., as first vice president, Roy Bardole from Rippey, Iowa, as secretary, and Feltcher Clark from Ruleville, Miss., as treasurer.

The board also elected four vice presidents — Kim Larson from Wilmar, Minn; Marc Curtis from Leland, Miss.; Gordon Wassenaar from Prairie City, Iowa; and Roger Hadley from Woodburn, Ind. These nine officers from the executive committee for the association. The election was held on Saturday, July 26, during the association's scheduled meeting of its board of directors.

The new ASA president, Mark Berg, said, "My goal is to build more and stronger coalitions with other ag groups and non-ag groups in order to positively influence farm, environmental, tax, transportation, and trade policies. Another high priority is to work with the United Soybean Board to go in a positive manner that is very beneficial for soybean farmers."

Berg has been a member of the ASA since 1980, serving on its board since 1989. He has served as chairman of the ASA Public Affairs Committee (1996/97), and membership and revenue development committee (1995/96), and as a member of the strategic planning (1992/93), trade access (1991/92), and public affairs committees (1989/90 and 1990/91). Berg served on the South Dakota State Soybean Association Board from 1980 until 1983, and was state president for two years (1988/89 and 1989/90). Berg farms soybeans, corn and wheat with his family, and he also operates Berg's Ag Services, Inc. which retails custom crop protection chemicals, feed, seed and extruded soybeans. He is also a past national vice president of the Jaycess.

Mike Yost, who will become president of the association next year, said, "I see a fabulous opportunity for U.S. soybeans and their products in international markets, and I want to do everything possible to help the U.S. soybean farmer capture those markets. ASA has a long history of knocking down trade barriers and developing export markets."

Yost most recently served the ASA as chairman of the trade policy and international affairs committee, and he has gained experience through his service at the state level. A member of ASA since 1979, Yost served as president of the Minnesota Soybean Growers Association (MSGA) in 1992, and prior to that, he served as vice-president for two years. Yost served as chairman of the Minnesota SoyAction Committee for two years and was the MSGA representative to the National Biodiesel Board. Yost and his family operate a soybean, corn, and small grains farm, near Murdock, Minn.

The carcass weighed 46 pounds, had a loin-eye area of 2.05 square inches; backfat of .1 inch; resulted in 46.1 percent retail cuts; and had an average daily gain of 1.45 pounds. Three Pioneers Recognized By National Dairy Shrine

COLUMBUS, OH — Three men who left their mark on the dairy industry have been selected to receive Pioneer awards from the National Dairy Shrine, the "Hall of Fame" of the dairy industry. They are Delbert Kingston, James Lewis and Kenneth Wallin. All will be honored at the annual National Dairy Shrine awards banquet in Madison, Wisconsin on October 2, 1997 in conjunction with World Dairy Expo. Following the banquet, their portraits will hang at the National Dairy Shrine Visitors' Center and Museum in Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin.

Delbert H. Kingston was described by his nominator as the "last of the great all-around livestock men." His livestock versatility was proven at Curtiss Candy Farms, Cary, Illinois, where he was superintendent of livestock from 1942 to 1954. Nationally prominent herds of Ayrshires, Brown Swiss, Guernseys, Holsteins, Jerseys, Angus and Shorthorn cattle were developed side-by-side with herds of Duroc, Hampshire and Yorkshire hogs, as well as a herd of Shropshire sheep.

Kingston stove to breed outstanding animals in individuality, production, and longevity for each of the breeds he worked with. Hundreds of outstandinng sires with the Curtiss Candy prefix went into A.I. service and made notable contributions to their respective breeds.

The Curtiss herd also excelled on the Midwest show circuit. One year Curtiss cows captured Grand Champion Cow honors in all five dairy breeds — two at the Iowa State Fair and three at the Minnesota State Fair.

Kingston was born in Muskego, Wisconsin where he was the state's 4-H Champion Boy in 1914. From 1926 to 1942 he developed his own herd, Margendell Guernseys, in Waukesha County, Wisconsin. As secretary/fieldman for the Waukesha County Guernsey Breeders, he built it into the fastest growing organization in its history.

Following the Curtiss dispersal sales in the early 1950s, Kingston reestablished his Margendell Guernseys in Illinois. He also operated his own auction and consulting service. Kingston was a booster of youth activities through 4-H and FFA — both as a parent in Waukesha County and during his time at Curtiss. He also served as a state, regional and national judge of dairy cattle.

Kingston was known as a man of integrity, knowledge, and steadfastness of purpose. He and his wife, Marjory, both deceased now, raised three sons and a daughter.

The second Pioneer, James M. Lewis, was "one of the great judges and sale selectors in breed history," according to his nominator. "He was always a good breeder as well as a leader of breed organizations. He displayed tremendous interest in helping people of all ages become interested in registered cattle."

Lewis was raised on a dairy farm near Hamilton, Ohio, where his first herd of registered Holsteins was established. In addition to breeding Holsteins, he served as a consultant and judge, and he spoke at many annual meetings and breeders' forums. As a national and international judge, he judged Holsteins, Brown Swiss and Ayrshires in 31 states and six foreign countries.

Lewis was active in the Holstein Association, serving on its board for eight years and as chairman of the executive committee for two. He also served on the North American Dairy Show Committee and the American Farm Bureau Dairy Committee.

In Ohio, he participated in various boards and committees of the Farm Bureau, cooperatives, Ohio Extension, 4-H, the Ohio Agricultural Research Development Center, ASC, and the State Fair. For 24 years, he was a member of the Nationwide Mutural Insurance board where his efforts helped save Ohio farmers millions of dollars.

The Lewis herd was dispersed in 1979. At the time, the herd average was 19,631M and 750F. There were 23 cows classified excellent and 22 at very good. Sale average was over $6,000 on 87 head. Over the years, more than 20 bulls were sold or leased to bull studs. Registered Holstein cattle were sold to 31 states and several foreign countries. In the last 15 years of his life, Lewis helped his two sons, James and Richard, develop Shanghigh Farms in Orient, Ohio where his wife, Marjorie, still resides.

This year's third Pioneer award goes to Kenneth E. Wallin, general manager of Badger Breeders Cooperative, Shawano, Wisconsin, from 1946 until it merged with other A.I. cooperatives to form Midwest Breeders Cooperative in 1966. He was then manager of Midwest Breeders (now 21st Century Genetics) until his retirement in 1976.

Wallin's influence went well beyond the cooperative he managed. He was a charter founder of the National Association of Animal Breeders (NAAB) and he was instrumental in getting private A.I. organizations to become members of NAAB. He also served NAAB as a director and president.

In later years, Wallin was highly involved in the governance of the Farm Credit System, serving with long tenure on the board of the Farm Credit Banks of St. Paul and on numerous national committees.

In Wisconsin, Wallin chaired the committee for consolidating the Wisconsin Council of Agriculture Cooperatives and the Wisconsin Association of Cooperatives into the current Wisconsin Federation of Cooperatives. And he served on the board of the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection.

Wallin was described by one nominator as "a leader, an innovator and a moderator. His pleasant, even disarming, personality helped many causes make progress in the dairy industry." Another nominator call him a "visionary for his time. His many speeches on the cutting issues facing agriculture provided positive leadership in the evolution of change for the industry."

Born in Minnesota, Wallin's family moved to a farm in northwest Wisconsin when he was 4 years old. He graduated from Wisconsin State College-River Falls in 1936. He spent several years as a vocational agriculture teacher and an agricultural Extension agent in Shawano County before joining Badger Breeders. Wallin and his wife, Jan, currently reside in Marshfield, Wisconsin.

DAIRY MARKET PRICE COMMENTARY

ducers are not at all content with these lower prices.

The discount between the Chicago cheese price and the monthly survey price developed by the National Agricultural Statistics Service is widening, with some divergence seen between those 2 markets

"The survey price didn't keep pace with the Chicago price," a broker said "The spread widened by about 3c with a discount offered to the Chicago price "

The July Basic Formula Price (BFP) announced by the USDA on Tuesday rose 12c from June at a 3.5% butterfat test, about in-line with market expectations This price was $3.63 lower than Jly 1996. The futures market had expected $11 00/cwt in BFP

The BFP, which is linked strongly to the price of cheese in the cash market, will likely show an even larger rise in August's BFP if cheese prices continue to rise, traders said

However, one broker said he doesn't expect August BFP to go above $12 00/cwt ahead of school openings.

FUTURES AND CASH PRICES

On the Coffee, Sugar and Cocoa Exchange, strong liquidation out of the nearby Jly contract, due to expiration, caused open interest to fall, but brokers said they were confident the open interest would rise gradually again over the next few weeks

Traders said they were impressed by the liquidity of the CSCE's BFP contract BFP milk futures' open interest was down 201 lots at 1,242, mainly due to a large 208 lot fall in the Jly contract amid liquidation Aug open interest fell 7 lots to 489

CSCE BFP milk futures were mixed on Wednesday Aug rose 10c to $11.93, while Sep rose 5c to $12 29

CSCE raw milk Aug futures rose 2 cents on Wednesday to $13.95 after falling sharply in the last week. Oct was also 2c higher at $14.52

CSCE non-fat dry milk futures were down to steady Aug fell 50 points to 105 50c Cheddar cheese futures were up 2 20c at 131 00c, basis the Aug contract while Oct remained steady at 133 00c

At the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, BFP milk prices were slightly higher across the board Aug rose 7c to $11 93, while Sep rose 15c to $12 40c

CME grade AA butter futures were unchanged at 110 00c, basis Sep, while Nov was also steady at 95.10c.

CME BFP open interest rose 24 lots on Wednesday to 144, while butter open interest was steady at 195 lots.

FEED GRAINS

Grain merchants said Wednesday cash and futures markets probably would tread water until farmers found out whether forecast rain materializes this weekend in the Midwest. But forecasts that have increased chances for widespread rain are pushing today's grain price projections lower.

The National Weather Service's 6- to 10-day forecast released Wednesday predicted normal to above-normal precipitation for the Midwest, the second straight outlook that predicts cool, wet weather for the entire region

Many Midwest growing regions, especially in a stretch from Illinois to Ohio, still need rain. Merchants said many farmers in those locations were complaining that tips of corn plants were not filling.

Nonetheless, various forecasts predicting rain have caused cash and futures traders to predict soybean and corn prices will drop 3 to 5 cents per bushel and 2 to 3c, respectively.

Midwest merchants reported little selling this morning, most sales consisted of forward sales of corn and soybeans farmers expect to harvest this fall.

Pa. Farmers Union Calls For Writing Campaign

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Farmers Union (PAFU) recently launched a campaign to encourage dairy producers throughout the state to write their members of the U.S. Congress and U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Secretary Dan Glickman urging them to establish an immediate floor price for milk of $14.50 per hundredweight.

"Elimination of a safety net for dairy producers in the 1996 farm bill has resulted in huge price volatility," said Junk. "Farmers cannot continue to produce milk at prices at or below those of 20 years ago and expect to stay in business, and when dairy farmers go out of business, related sectors of the economy will suffer as well.

PAFU President Robert Junk, along with National Farmers Union President Leland Swenson, visited with the secretary and congressional leadership to urge establishment of a floor price for milk and are now calling on grassroots support of the initiative.

At the beginning of this year, Farmers Union led an effort known as the "Change the Cheese Exchange," campaign, that was aimed at removal of the thinly-traded National Cheese Exchange in Green Bay, Wis., from USDA's basic formula price for milk. Many producers believed, and the University of Wisconsin research seemed to collaborate, the Exchange's vulnerability to price manipulation. The Wisconsin Exchange closed April 25, 1997, which Junk says is a good first step toward reforming farmers' milk prices. The Farmers Union campaign has also resulted in USDA's decision to make forward purchases of dairy products for the school lunch and milk programs.

"Farmers Union is pushing for a basic formula price based on production costs, wholesale cheese prices and retail milk prices," said Junk. "When the National Cheese Exchange closed, USDA agreed to base the price on wholesale cheese prices. Their responsiveness is very encouraging, but we need a price that will take into account producer's costs and retail prices."

The National Farmers Union campaign to reform dairy policy is also calling for federal oversight of the new Chicago Mercantile Exchange for cheese, legislation outlawing "trading against interest" on commodity markets, and public education on the disparity between producer and retail prices for dairy products. Farmers Union state officers are also urging producers to provide input on USDA reform of Federal Milk Marketing Orders, as mandated under the 1996 farm bill.

Producer milk pricing will be a key topic of National Farmers Union's annual legislative fly-in to be held Sept. 7-10, 1997, in Washington, D.C.

Sonnen's Aged Cow Wins Lebanon Open Holstein Show

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — A 6-year-old Holstein owned by Sonnen Springs Farm of Richland was named senior and grand champion of the Lebanon County Open Holstein Show August 1 at the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds.

The show was held as part of the week-long Lebanon Area Fair and was judged by John Burkett, of East Freedom. Burkett remarked on the quality of the show entries and complimented Lebanon County dairy cattle breeders, remarking that they have a wide and long-standing reputation for producing top quality animals.

There were more than 240 animals entered in the show, and some of the junior animal classes exceeded 20 animals, though there were some late scratches, or withdrawals, from competition.

Shown by Adam Sonnen, the aged cow grand champion was 6-year-old Sonnen-Springs Po Dulcile, out of sire Plushanski Odin-Et and dam Sonnen Acres Job Stewart. She was bred and is owned by Adam's father Malcom.

The cow's most recent classification is 91-percent Excellent, and she has a 365-day lactation record, started at 4 years, 10 months, of 34,860 pounds of milk; 3.5 percent, or 1,207 pounds, of fat; and 3.2 percent, or 1,132 pounds of protein. She is due to calf in September to Ilin-Ivy Inspiration.

The champion wasn't the first win for the family farm. Sonnen-Acres showed the grand champion of the open show in 1984, a Gemini daughter, Sonnen-Acres Gemini Lucre.

He said he felt very humble standing at the halter of the championship cow.

"It's an honor to stand with people like John Bomgardner, and other people in Lebanon County, who have been an inspiration in breeding the type of cattle that we are."

Judge Burkett, a Holstein breeder (who was to serve as judge today, August 9, at the Pennsylvania Holstein Association's South Central Championship Show in Shippensburg), named the cow the best bred and owned of the show, and selected her for showing the best udder of the event.

Sonnen's aged cow also received the annual Albert Moyer Memorial Award.

The reserve senior and reserve grand champion of the show was also an aged cow, 9-year-old Loving-Meadows Miss Anthony, bred and owned by Nelson Bomgardner, Ono, a member of the John and Margaret Bomgardner family.

The John and Margaret Bomgardner family was named the premier breeder and exhibitor of the show, a fete which they have accomplished last year and a number of times in the past.

They also showed the junior champion of the show, a bred and owned winter yearling, Loving-Meadows Magdaline, a daughter of Carnation Counselor-ET.

The reserve junior champion was a winter calf, Ju-Vindale Marusman Ha, owned by Amy Moyer of Womelsdorf. Bred by Vincent and Juliet Wagner of Myerstown, she is a DT-Queens-Manor Marks daughter.

At the Lebanon Area Fair, the open Holstein show includes a bull class and championship. There were four entries.

The grand champion bull was a junior yearling, Webb-Hill Jurist Joseph, bred and owned by Erica Shollenberger of Womelsdorf, out of sire Ked Jurist and dam Webb-Hill Valdale Joan.

The reserve grand champion bull was a calf, Promise-Lane Duster Buster, bred and owned by Amanda Martin of Lebanon.

During the selection for the grand champion female of the show, judge Burkett selected three animals from which to choose grand and reserve grand. The runnerup was a senior 3-year-old, Dalee-Bred Counselor Posey, bred and owned by Timothy Vail of Lebanon.

It is worthy of mention, because the cow was also named grand champion of the Lebanon youth division Holstein show earlier in the week, as well as supreme champion of all breeds in the Lebanon Area Fair youth dairy cattle shows, and was grand champion Holstein during the mid-July Southeast District Youth Dairy Show.

The Lebanon Area Fair Holstein show also recognizes the oldest cow of the show, and that honor belonged to Gloryland Sexational, owned by Klinedell Farms of Myerstown. She was born Nov. 6, 1985.

Vail's Senior 3-Year-Old Is Supreme At Lebanon

in the past, he remarked at the strong showing of the breed and the high quality of the champions.

Because of the volume of entries, the Lebanon Area Fair separates the showing of Holsteins between the youth and the open divisions. The other breed shows combine youth and open divisions.

Judge for the colored breeds was Michael Heath, of Maryland.

For the youth, the Fair recognizes a supreme champion among all breeds.

A separate competition is also held to recognize the best bred and owned animal, though it incorporates several criteria in addition to a judge's placing of an animal.

The competition is decided based on the highest accumulated points out of 50 possible points. The thoroughness and quality of the participant's project book (20 points), showmanship (10 points) and fitting (10 points) are considered, as well as quality of the animal (10 points).

Out of the 12 contestants, Amanda Martin of Lebanon was the winner of that competition with 47.7 points, while Daryl Maulfair of Jonestown was second with 45.3 points, and Melinda Bomgardner of Lebanon (who is also Lebanon County dairy priness) was third with 45 points.

Lebanon Agway supports the competition providing $100 savings bonds for the top three winners.

Youth Holstein Show

In the Holstein breed 4-H division, following Vail's grand champion, was a senior 2-year-old, C Comestar Senata Starbuck, shown by Melonica Kauffman, of Lancaster.

The FFA grand champion was a senior 2-year-old, Windy-Crest Sabastian O, exhibited by Scott Nolt of Lebanon.

The FFA reserve grand champion, a 5-year-old, C Vickhaven Lindy Jasmin, was shown by Scott's wife Karen Nolt.

The 4-H junior champion Holstein was Ju-Vindale Marksman Ha, a winter calf, owned by Amy Moyer of Womelsdorf.

The 4-H reserve junior champion Holstein was a summer yearling, Turnpike-View Charles Pr, owned by Dustin Horning, of Stevens.

The FFA junior champion was also shown by Scott Nolt, a homebred fall calf, Country-Path Stardust Julia, which was also a daughter of his senior and grand champion.

The FFA reserve junior champion was another fall calf, Dale-Pride Osado Beauty, exhibited by Kurt Hostetter of Annville.

The calf classes in the youth Holstein show were very large and appropriately took some time to judge.

The audience and participants got a little comic relief when some ringside adults persuaded Michelle Merten of the North Mountain 4-H Club to take her animal into the ring with the calf class that was currently being judged by Creedin Corman.

Merten and the 4-H club were operating a petting zoo at the fair. Because of the avian influenza outbreak in Lebanon and Lancaster

Farmers, Ranchers To Benefit From Lesser Known Tax Bill Provisions

FERGUS FALLS, Minn. — The historic budget-balancing legislation signed recently by President Clinton included not only major tax changes and spending cuts that will affect nearly all Americans, it also included a series of lesser known tax provisions that will be critical to many individual farm and ranch families, according to a national agricultural leader.

"This legislation is a welcome testament that our national political system still works — that conflicting political agendas and parties can still debate their views and arrive at a compromise that addresses vital needs of the country," said Wayne Nelson, president of Communicating for Agriculture (CA), a national rural non-profit organization.

"The most important thing now is for the national economy to keep performing as it has, so the revenue income stream can be sustained and we can begin to consider repaying the national debt. A big part of that will be keeping the agricultural industry healthy because it is a foundation that undergirds much of the national economy. Agriculture's economic health affects jobs and profits in equipment manufacturing and food industries, U.S. exports, and the service and retail sectors throughout rural America."

Nelson noted the omnibus budget-tax legislation included a number of needed specific provisions addressing several thorny issues that impact farmers and ranchers. The bill:

- Clarifies that producers can continue to use deferred payment contracts for commodities they sell and pay taxes on their income in the year they actually receive the income, rather than when they sign the contract. The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) recently had sought to subject some producers to the Alternative Minimum Tax on deferred contract income.
- Reestablishes income averaging for farmers and ranchers that will enable them to average their income for tax purposes over the three-year period from 1998-2000. CA has been a strong advocate of reinstating income averaging or a tax-deferred savings plan to enable producers to even out their taxable income from year to year because of agriculture's volatile earnings.
- Accelerates the phase-in of a higher tax deduction allowed to self-employed people — including many farmers and ranchers — for health insurance premiums, eventually raising it to 100 percent in year 2007. It previously was scheduled to rise at a slower rate — reaching only 80 percent in year 2006.
- Makes no changes to eliminate or reduce the tax incentive for ethanol production.
- Provides aid to farmers who are victims of floods and disasters by allowing a one-year deferral of taxes on income from livestock sales they had to make because of the disasters. Other tax flexibility is provided for disaster victims, including relief of penalties for IRA withdrawals.
- Allows businesses to defer taxes on income from the sale of stock in a refinery or agricultural processing facility to an eligible farmer-owned cooperative, as an incentive to encourage more farmer participation in value-added industries.
- Reinstates the home office tax deduction.

"Many farmers, ranchers and rural small businesses will also be able to benefit from the mainstay tax changes, including the estate tax reforms, capital gains tax reductions, the $500 per child tax credit, the children's health plan for low-income families, and the savings and tax incentive programs for higher education," said Nelson.

The farm leader testified several times in Washington for reforms that would prevent families from having to sell farms and small businesses to pay estate taxes. The new legislation phases in a higher estate tax unified credit from $600,000 to $1 milion by 2007, and provides an additional immediate exclusion for family-owned businesses and farms of $700,000. The targeted family farm and business exemption will remain at a combined $1.3 million.

Agriculture did not win on all its fights, Nelson noted. The bill failed to include an amendment sought by CA and other groups that would change new IRS regulations that disqualify small dairy and cattle producers for the earned income tax credit in low-income years when they sell culled cows and breeding stock. A second failed amendment would have put a moratorium on a new IRS policy that seeks to charge retired farmers self-employment and Social Security taxes on rental income from their farms. For 40 years, cash rental farm income has not been subject to self-employment taxes.

Communicating for Agriculture is a national non-profit rural advocacy organization celebrating its 25th anniversary this year. It is made up of farmer, rancher and rural small business members in 50 states.

Maryland/Virginia Announces New Assistant General Manager

RESTON, Va. — The Board of Directors and Management of Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative Association, Inc. are pleased to announce that Robert Shore will be hired as the Assistant General Manager, effective September 1, 1997. In his new position, Shore will assist George Walgrove, Secretary and General Manager, with the daily management of Maryland and Virginia, as well as continue to play an active role with east coast cooperative organizations.

Shore joins Maryland and Virginia after working as the General Manager of Carolina Virginia Milk Producers Association, Charlotte, North Carolina for 13 years. Hired as the first General Manager in 1984, he was responsible for organizing the dairy farmer cooperative, which numbers 450 members in six southeastern states.

Prior to Carolina Virginia, Shore worked in varous field work and procurement positions for Sealtest, Kraft's Dairy Group. Raised on a dairy farm in Piedmont, North Carolina, he graduated from North Carolina State University in 1981 with Bachelor of Science degrees in Food Science and Animal Science.

Walgrove is excited about Robert's addition to the cooperative. He commented, "Robert and I have worked together on key legislative and cooperative projects for many years. I look forward to working more closely with him as a member of Maryland and Virginia's management team."

Agriculture Promotion To Benefit Farmers And Consumers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — At a suburban grocery store here, Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. recently kicked-off a pilot program to promote the sale of fresh Pennsylvania produce.

"Gov. Tom Ridge has challenged the Agriculture Department to develop new and innovative marketing opportunities for the state's No. 1 industry," Hayes said. "This public-private partnership focusing on our state's vegetable growers is the first of its kind for promoting Pennsylvania's abundant, high quality produce."

The pilot project, designed to increase the market for locally-grown produce, introduces area supermarket buyers to Pennsylvania farmers.

Administered by the Pennsylvania Food Merchants Assocation, the project links local growers with participating supermarkets and provides roadside and point of sale materials to call attention to the availability of locally-grown produce. Over 40 billboards advertising the project will be posted in Bucks, Cumberland, Dauphin, Lancaster, Montgomery and York counties during the next two months.

The project will be evaluated at the end of the growing season to determine if it should be expanded statewide in future years.

This partnership is led by the Agriculture Department and the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program, with cooperation from the Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Program.

(mostly) counties, poultry have been banned from being exhibited at fairs in those counties and several surrounding counties.

That put pressure on the 4-H club to locate some additional animals for their petting zoo. A 5-month-old miniature donkey, "Lucky" was lended to the cause by Randy Ebersole.

To keep the recently weaned donkey calm, some of the members took him for walks during the day around the fairgrounds.

To snickers and chuckles, Michelle proudly walked the donkey around the ring as the last Holstein of the class, right past an apparently unphased judge Corman.

One person remarked that it was apparent the Holstein registry book had been opened up. (The Holstein Association USA recently approved changing the requirements of its herd book to allow the progeny of an unregistered animal to become fully registered, after the progeny achieve greater than 99 percent registered parentage. Up until then, the percentage of registered bloodline is reported. The issue has proven controversial among some breeders.)

Merten exited with the donkey, that led well, after one trip around the ring.

Ayrshire

In the Ayrshire breed, the senior and grand champion of the open show and the 4-H show was a bred and owned junior 3-year-old, Maulfair-Acres Festival D.J., owned by Daryl Maulfair, Jonestown. Daryl managed to show and win despite being obviously hindered by a very recent thumb fracture suffered during wrestling practice. He managed to still do most of the fitting for his animals as well as show them.

He also exhibited the open and 4-H junior champion of the show, a summer yearling, Maulfair-Acres Trident Carmel.

His sister Jennifer Maulfair showed the reserve senior and reserve grand champion of the 4-H divisions, also a junior 3-year-old, Masonic-Homes Welcome Rebecca.

The reserve senior and grand champion of the open division was a 5-year-old, Bonnie Brae Cinnomon, shown by Amber Hernley, of Lebanon.

The reserve junior champion of the 4-H division was a fall calf, shown by Merritt Hernley, Glen Malcolm Heligo Rachel.

Brown Swiss

In the Brown Swiss breed, the open division senior and grand champion was an aged cow, Mort Sterling Melissa, shown by Gary Lee Mase of Lebanon.

However, most of the rest of the show champions were offspring from matings between the Meadow-Hill Farm's Titan Agatha, a previous show winner, and Bridge View Elegant Jade-ET.

The reserve senior and reserve grand champ of the open show was a 5-year-old, Meadow-Hill Jade Allison, owned by Garrett Mase. It was also the FFA senior and grand champion.

Garrett's sister Alicia was breeder of his reserve grand champion, Jade Allison. Alicia showed the 4-H senior and grand champion, a 5-year-old she bred and owns, Meadow-View Jade Alice, a full sister to Allison.

The FFA reserve grand champion was another cow bred by Alicia. Garrett showed Meadow-Hill Jade Angel, a younger full sister to the 5-year-olds, that happened to be dry (under 4-year-old) for the

The best bred and owned contest of the Lebanon Area Fair judges not only the show animals of participating youth, but their project books and showmanship as well. The top three, from the left, from third place to first, are Melinda Bomgardner, who is also the county dairy princess, Daryl Maulfair and Amanda Martin.

Anthony Mase, younger brother to Alicia and Garrett, showed the 4-H reserve senior and grand champion, an aged cow, Pheasant Ridge Marie.

The junior champion of the Brown Swiss open and FFA divisions also was owned by Garrett Mase. It was a fall yearling, Meadow-Hill Jade Afton — again, a full sister to the other champions, and also bred by Alicia.

The open division reserve junior champion was a fall calf, Country Path Com Monica, bred and owned by Karen Nolt. It was also the FFA reserve junior champion.

The 4-H reserve junior champion was also a fall calf, Rudy Ridge Patrick Lisa, bred and owned by Keith Rudy of Jonestown.

Guernsey

The open division and 4-H champions of the Lebanon Area Fair Guernsey show were the same.

Andrew Ebersole of Annville showed the open and 4-H division senior and grand, reserve senior and grand, and reserve junior champions.

His senior 2-year-old, Orchard View Perfect Lil Girl, a bred and owned animal, was senior and grand champion. His 5-year-old, Stone Mill Frank Linden was reserve senior and reserve grand champion.

While there were no junior animals entered in the FFA division, and therefore no junior champions, Ebersole's entries captured the senior and reserve senior and grand championships of that division. His 4-year-old Cedar Fringed Chancer was named FFA senior and grand champion, while his junior 3-year-old, Sher Beck Fayette Olive was named reserve grand champion.

The reserve junior champion Guernsey of the open and 4-H divisions was a winter calf, Lebanon Valley B Lilly, a home-farm bred animal exhibited by Erin Smith of Palmyra.

Jersey

The Jersey show at the Fair was fairly strong with about 60 animals entered.

In the open division, the senior and grand champion was a bred and owned senior 3-year-old, Blue Mountain Royal Delight, owned by Andrew Dice of Fredericksburg.

The reserve senior and reserve grand champ was a senior 2-year-old, Gaywind's Berretto Camay, owned by Luke and Carol Heagy of Lebanon.

The open division and 4-H division junior champion was a spring yearling, Orchard View Goran Milan Lindsey, owned by Amanda Ebersole.

The reserve junior champion 4-H Jersey was a summer yearling, Rog-Al BT Rhonda, owned by Jeremy Meck of Denver.

In the FFA division, Andrew Dice's open division champion was also the grand champion, while his junior 2-year-old, Blue Mountain Fascinator Helen, was reserve senior and reserve grand champion. Dice also showed the FFA junior champion, a bred and owned spring calf, Blue Mountain Poseidon Petunia. There was no FFA reserve junior champion.

Following the selection of the supreme champion and best bred and owned, a giant ice cream sundae was dished out to the audience as part of a dairy promotion held by the Lebanon County Dairy Promotion Committee with ice cream donated by Land'O Lakes Cooperative. Pro Ag Members Press For Higher Milk Prices

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — As a follow-up to the National Dairy Farmers Rally in Washington, D.C. on July 15, 30 members of Pro Ag journeyed to Washington last week and meet with several Congressmen and/or their aides in an attempt to gain additional support for favorable legislation from Congress to alleviate the financial crunch being experienced by dairy farmers across the U.S.

Kevin Mathias, ag aide to Senator Arlen Specter, (R) Pa. brought the group up to date concerning Specter's involvement with the dairy crisis.

Richard McKee, head of the dairy division of the U.S.D.A. explained the constraints that the U.S.D.A. operates under in relationship to the 1995-96 Farm Bill. McKee told the group if Congress passed some new legislation to correct the low prices paid to dairy farmers, it could take up to 3 months to implement any new legislation.

The Pro Ag group consisted of dairy farmers from Susquehanna, Wayne, Pike, Lackawanna, Wyoming, Union, Juniata, Lycoming, Luzerne, and Dauphin counties.

Several Congressional offices from New York, California and Pennsylvania pledged to support the dairy farmers' cause, providing the group obtained additional Congressional support.

Arden Tewksbury, manager of Pro Ag, informed Senator Richard Lugar's staff that the efforts being put forth by Pro Ag are the same as the National Farmers Union and N.F.O.'s policies.

Tewksbury also reminded Lugar's staff that the Senator announced his support for the Northeast Dairy Compact during his bid for the office of president. Tewksbury urged Lugar to take the same position on increasing prices to all dairy farmers.

One of the most productive meetings of the day was held with Congressman Joe McDade from Scranton, Pa. All 30 people attended this session. The Congressman was reminded that approximately 1,500 dairy farmers operate in his district. This figure represents about 14 percent of all the dairy farmers in Federal Order #2.

Congresman McDade explained to the group that he felt the family farms should be allowed to stay in business and that he realizes something must be done.

McDade will be meeting with other Congressmen in an attempt to come up with favorable Congressional intervention in the dairy farmers' serious dilemma.

The Pro Ag group, operating in six teams passed out packets to Members of Congress illustrating that 78 percent of the milk is still produced by true family farms and it was important to protect these farms.

Corrective measurers are needed to assure our dairy farmers of a fair price, to assure our consumers of a wholesome supply of milk at an affordable price, to assure a stable rural economy and to assure a safe environment.

Pro Ag is estimating that prices received by dairy farmers for July's produced milk will range between $11.55 and $11.65 per cwt. which translates to $1 per gallon.

In July of 1979 the price paid to dairy farmers was $11.60 per cwt.

make all the adjustments they need so we will keep making more milk for them, and blame it on us.

The key here is to reduce our production so that we will dry up the amount of milk so they will have less to funnel into the classes that they wish to buy from . . .

Tighten up the supply by working less, and make more money at the same time.

We are not buying milk replacer, we use grade A. class #1 fluid milk to feed all our calves here on our farm.

By doing that we are not feeding the market that is killing us, because of the class 3-A powder price only reduces the price. Just think how much of reduction in production that would create if all of you did that.

The key here is (REDUCTION OF PRODUCTION) keeping it off the market.

We have the right to do with it what we wish so let's be smart and play the game too.

With the tightening of market by reducing the amount of milk that they have to paly with is to our advantage.

We can also change our federal order now before they consolidate the orders. The rules that need to be changed are the rule that we have to pay for hauling of the milk and the rule that we should have to pay the Co-op payment provision (SEC. 1002.7) that is 4¢ alone.

With the merging of the orders each Co-op is competing for milk, but it seems to me they want their cake and eat it too. They get the money in the co-op payment provision to lobby for us for a higher price. Has anyone of you seen a difference in your checks lately?

Co-ops are made up of farmers for the benefit of farmers.

I wonder how the U.P.S. STRIKE is going to go?

I wonder why the U.S. POST OFFICE needs to raise the price for postage? Can't they get more efficient, tighten their belts, or get out of the business.

With 15 cents here and four cents there and grade (B) milk nowhere we surely will be gone, if we go to the free market system. So let's not let that happen let's reduce production. Let's make the market work for us instead of against us.

Take the time to find ways to use some fluid milk on your farms now, make butter or your own cheese.

Buy some pigs and raise some wholesome veal for yourself, because two can play the game.

Maybe if the "Call Provision" has to be used to get our point across then so be it.

We learned how to become efficient now let's show them how thrifty we can be.

Having fun down on the farm.

Ag Progress Days Set For August 12 - 14

Robert Oberheim, show manager, said precision agriculture is a hot topic in the farm community right now, and a new precision demonstration heads the list of production-related attractions. "By using the latest technology in global positioning systems, geographic information systems and on-board computers in combines and tractors, growers can adjust their management practices to become more efficient," Oberheim said.

As for the zucchini "traps," horticulture research at Penn State shows that zucchini squash plants attract pests from cantaloupes so that insecticide need only be applied to the "trap" plants. This reduces the chemical exposure and production costs for growing cantaloupes. Many research projects will be shown on the many regularly scheduled bus tours around the research farm.

A full schedule of events, related to Penn State's equine educational program, highlights the horse industry's contributions to Pennsylvania's agriculture and economy.

If you have lawn and garden questions, they can also be answered at Ag Progress Days. Experts on insect, disease, and plant problems from the College of Agricultural Sciences faculty and cooperative extension will be on hand to help you.

And you will be able to test drive tractors of various makes. This year you can even test drive lawn and garden tractors with less than 35 horsepower. The ride-and-drive events will give visitors hands-on experience with the latest models.

And there are events for the whole family. Poison prevention, farm safety, food demonstrations, and how to stay well are all part of the family room exhibits. These exhibits all stress the importance to all Pennsylvania families of raising children, making the most of financial resources and maintaining physical and mental health.

And if you like competition, you can get involved in a high-tech agricultural quiz show or get a close-up look at insects. This year's theme,"Pennsylvania Agriculture...A Moving Force in a Changing World" focuses on the economics of Pennsylvania farms.

Several new exhibits will explore the role agriculture plays in Pennsylvania's economy, as well as the opportunities to market Pennsylvania's products on a national and international scale. "While many Pennsylvania companies make money by focusing on local markets, many firms are seeding customers in emerging markets in Europe, Asia, and Latin America," says H. Louis Moore, professor of agricultural economics.

At the College Exhibits Building, visitors can learn how farmers and agricultural companies--and their business practices--have evolved over the last 50 years in response to consumer and market trends. In addition, curious consumers can see how each dollar spent on food is shared by farmers, processors, and other food-related business. A hands-on farm finance demonstration, staffed by Penn State faculty, will crunch the numbers in financial questions using a cutting-edge computer program.

If you produce food or eat it, you will find something of interest at Ag Progress Days.

Secretary Hayes Promises PDA Support For Ag Ed

vote and a majority is five.

Coincidentally, the number five happened to relate to the consortium of people in attendance.

The five-state regional conference was held as part of The National Council for Agricultural Education's larger national effort to prepare for the future — Reinventing Agricultural Education for the Year 2020.

The special project is one of the National FFA Foundation Inc.'s efforts, and is funded by the W.K. Kellog Foundation, which has been involved with visioning activities for the future of agriculture for several years.

Monday's envisioning conference included those involved with agricultural education in Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, New Jersey and Delaware. Each state had at about 10 or more people represented.

The Milton Hershey School Agricultural and Environmental Education Program served as host for the event.

Hayes was the keynote speaker during the conference that included several speakers and group envisioning activities and discussions.

The group of people involved is considered a "consortium of commissioners of agriculture and agricultural leaders."

The majority of the program stressed getting participants to envision the future, the role of agriculture and the food delivery system, and the educational needs and probable educational delivery system.

While it was stressed many times that there are no correct or incorrect futuristic scenarios, there are some that seem more logical, likely and desirable.

Envisioning the desirable and then working to develop plans for making it come true and then implementing those plans are basically the steps that are being followed in the national program.

In developing the program, the strategy was to break down the nation into several regions of states with similar interests into consortiums of agricultural leaders who would work cooperatively to bring about some insightful outlook and guidance.

According to R. Bryan Daniel, special projects director for the National Council for Agricultural Education, the entire process has been broken down into three basic steps — envisionment to decide where the nation wants to go; strategizing to decide how to get there; and implementation to make it become a reality.

Daniel said that the three step process is neverending. "We always have to be staying ahead and aggressive."

He also said that while there are many strategic plans, it takes commitment and cooperation and dedication to carrying out those plans to make any good of them.

He said that the program encompasses all 50 states and three territories.

Those 53 entities were broken down into subgroups — consortiums — and participants from each state and territory involved are to work within their own respective states to pursue it further with other groups.

He said that the NCAE's role is to provide training and materials for each consortium, which gets passed down to the states and to local leaders.

"The training works downward, but the answers (to how to enhance and improve agricultural education) happen from the ground up."

He said the Kellog Foundation has provided $1.49 million for three years to pursue the project and he said the money is beng pushed into the state and local groups.

Each group is to be provided with matching working funds for such activities as Monday's conference.

Secretary Hayes was well received by the group, beore and after giving a direct, no-nonsense speech.

Hayes, of Warriors Mark, had been retired from state government for several years after serving as a leader in the House of Representatives and as an advocate for agriculture for 22 years. In June he was made secretary of agriculture as the request of state Gov. Tom Ridge.

Since leaving political office in 1992, Hayes has been involved with agricultural education activities here and abroad.

His background, including military service as an officer in Vietnam, includes a degree in agricultural education and social studies, a master's degree in education and an administrative certificate. He also holds an honorary doctor of laws degree from Juniata College where he has served as a lecturer since retiring as a state representative.

The gist of the conference was preparing for the future and Hayes said that agricultural education is not only for the 20th century but for the 21st century as well.

"As we do close this 20th century, we are closing one that is much different than it was 100 years ago.

"We are opening a century that is different. Life is much more complex. Time is much more critical.

"In the 1800s you could contemplate changes for some time," he said, saying that farmers then looking at new crop varieties might have taken years to decide.

"Now you can't wait a year. It's true for every one of our human endeavors."

He said that it must be the mission of educators to prepare their charges and to educate their peers to be able to handle rapid change in all aspects of life, including agriculture.

"We must prepare them to be people who are adaptable to a changing landscape," he said.

He noted that there are signficiant changes in agriculture concerning opportunities for young people to become involved. And while he said that direct production farming may not be the same as when he was young, he considered agricultural opportunities to actually have expanded greatly.

"Agriculture is more wide open to young men and women; much more open," he said.

"A person could hardly mention any aspect (of life) that does not touch agriculture.

"Production agriculture is as exciting today as yesterday. It has changed. There are fewer people involved, but it is no less important. It is more important because we have a growing population."

He said that while production agriculture may require fewer people directly there are many support businesses, especially with globalization.

"There won't be fewer job titles, but rather there will be more."

He said that "Agricultural education is beset with problems. Here in Pennsylvania we see too often the closing of ag ed departments."

He said he was recently asked what can be done. He said that there is no more important number to saving and enhancing agricultural education than the number "5."

In the the state Senate 26 votes are needed to achieve a majority, and in the House of Representatives 102 votes are needed.

"We can have a good or lousy law with those numbers. The same is true with school boards in Pennsylvania. They decide whether or not there is to be agricultural education."

He said that recently he was made aware that one school district was contemplating closing its agricultural education program, while a nearby district was considering expanding its program.

Hayes said that both districts served basically the same type of communities and both were rural and agricultural.

The biggest difference between the two districts was five votes, he said, meaning the members who serve on the board.

In the past it was rare not to have some directly involved or very familiar with agriculture serving

How Sweet It Is, Growers Discover At Corn Twilight Meeting

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — "Revelation" could someday be the name of a new sweet corn variety. But it was no revelation to farmers to understand that if they didn't have irrigation this year, they "were really hurting," noted Tim Elkner.

Elkner, Lancaster County horticulture agent, spoke to about 30 sweet corn growers and agri-industry representatives Tuesday evening at the Penn State Extension Southeast Research Laboratory in Landisville.

Penn State hosted the first annual Southeast Pennsylvania Sweet Corn Twilight Meeting at the 110-acre station owned and operated by Penn State. Growers and industry representatives were on hand not only to examine variety trials of sweet corn, but to taste it.

Nine varieties were cooked before the start of the meeting and served to those attending. Varieties, ranging from white to bicolor, included Summer Flavor, Silverado, Silver King, Rapture, Incredible, Lancelot, Sweet Rhythm, Argent, and Silver Queen.

But there was more to the meeting than simply seeing what variety tasted best. Those who attended were introduced to some ways to incorporate integrated pest management (IPM) strategies into their operation.

In an informal poll taken before the meeting, less than 5 percent of the growers in attendance admitted using IPM strategies on their farms, which ranged from dozens of acres to half-acre plots.

Before the meeting, several growers spoke about the season and some of the challenges they faced. One Perry County grower, who grows about an acre for the fresh market, recorded three-quarters of an inch of rain Monday evening. He recently picked about 50 dozen corn, even though the county is eight inches behind in rainfall.

A grower from Manchester in York County grows seven acres of corn for fresh market. The county still lags eight inches behind in rainfall.

IPM could be one way to handle some of the challenges, even in a drought year such as this one. Elkner said that while many growers think IPM is "new," it has actually been used widely by research and industry for years, he noted.

IPM uses a wide array of strategies for measuring pest and disease situations in sweet corn fields (using beetle traps and insect prevalence measurements), the proper management of soil for fertility, pH, and rotation (to stem disease), and the use of disease-resistant and drought-tolerant cultivars.

One of the most exciting developments, according to many researchers, is the development of disease-resistant varieties.

He noted one grower who simply switched his tomato growing operation to a variety resistant to bacterial spot. He suggested that growers try varieties a little at a time to see if they would fit in on the farm.

Also, Elkner suggested that growers "do some of your own variety testing on a couple of rows," not only to see which varieties yield the best and perform under disease or insect pressure, but to try out new varieties on customers and develop a market.

Simple IPM can be knowing "when to spray, which is important as knowing what to spray," for insect or disease pressure, Elkner noted. Elkner also reminded the growers to carefully calibrate the sprayer and check nozzles for proper flow.

Of the many growers Elkner has spoken to, many have expressed their acceptance of IPM. Elkner told those who attended the twilight meeting that using IPM has allowed growers to "save money and have the benefits of reduced environmental impact.

"Many growers are concerned with the bottom line at the same time," he said. "Those two can go hand in hand."

At the meeting, commercial representatives were on hand to demonstrate vacuum seeding technology.

John Yocum, manager of the research station, told the growers that this growing year "was one of the most frustrating year I've ever had on the research farm," proving a challenge to properly raise the varieties. He noted that the spring was cold and wet followed by a hot and dry early summer. Many areas of Pennsylvania, including Lancaster County, remain under a drought watch.

For growers, it was a frustrating year in terms of the drought for standability and herbicide activation.

Yocum reviewed some of the herbicide programs available for growers.

Tim Elkner, Lancaster horticultural agent, indicated the varieties on the plots were planted from mid-May to early June on 24-inch rows using a soybean cone planter. Four feet is maintained between two rows devoted to each variety. There were a total of 20 different varieties available for view in the test plots, including white, yellow, and bicolors. Included were some sent by companies as commercial test varieties, not yet available to growers.

Lou Middleton, Chester County horticultural agent, tastes several varieties of corn at the twilight meeting, including Silver King, Silverado, Summer Flavor, and Argent.

Universities Join Forces

Animal Science is coordinating efforts to implement the program, and has edited the Environmental Assessment within the Environmental Assurance Program to meet the needs of producers in Pennsylvania. From the research realm, Wayne Hassinger and Dr. Tom Parsons at the Center for Animal Health and Productivity have developed a survey that is designed to document the current nutrient management practices of Pennsylvania swine producers. This information will be utilized to pinpoint areas for improvement within the industry and to help in the development of new strategies. The two universities are currently cooperating to deliver the Environmental Assurance Program to producers through farm visits.

During the farm visits, Environmental Assessment is conducted to evaluate the operation's environmental status and identify areas from improvement. The assessment converts the knowledge learned into a plan of action. Besides covering manure handling, odor reduction, regulations, and community relations, a major part of the assessment deals with preventing and planning for emergencies before they happen. For example, having a list of phone numbers of who to call in the event that your manure storage facility breaks or have plan for handling neighborhood complaints. Successful completion of the Environmental Assurance Program earns swine producers a certificate of merit from Penn State Cooperative Extension, a baseball cap from the National Pork Producer's Council, and the piece of mind that your operation is taking a proactive stand on these informative issues.

The environment is not an issue that swine producers can affort to overlook. As the traditional stewards of the earth, producers need to continue to search for profitable, efficient management strategies that enhance the environment. If you are interested in participating in the Environment Assurance Program, please contact Kelli Monahan, Nutrient Management Summer Fellow, New Bolton Center at (610) 444-5800 ext 2345 to schedule your farm visit.

Secretary Hayes Promises PDA Support For Ag Ed

on school boards and even in the state Legislature. Today, that has changed dramatically.

The people making decisions are not aware of what agriculture is and what it represents and the job of those who do is to educate the others.

He said helping to promote agricultural education is something that the state Department of Agriculture and the state should be doing, because after all it is the state's leading business, the largest economic force, and Pennsylvania should be doing everything it can to make support it and make it stronger.

Hayes said that in addition to being secretary of agriculture, he also is a member of the state Education Board, and he is prepared to work to local school districts; those that are thinking about closing their ag-education programs as well as those looking to expand.

"I think state government should be an advocate for agricultural education and not sit passively by while school districts close programs," he said.

He said that a vision must be developed, and at the PDA he is currently working on an action plan that seeks to determine who best the PDA can "interface with the Department of Educaiton to create vibrant programs."

He said that if the leaders present at the consortium would allow the PDA and him to be a part of their effort, he is willing to participate and advocate.

"At a time when people are asking about education, some (within the education system) look at (agricultural education) as adversarial, but it can be an opportunity, but only an opportunity ..." if it is presented properly.

"It costs more to sustain and ag ed program than a social studies program," Hayes said, suggesting that school boards and nonfarming taxpayers are motivated by money. He said they ask themselves, "Is it in the overall best interest if we continue (the ag ed program), when we can save 10s of thousands of dollars by discontinuing it?"

That, he said, is the question and it is up to ag education leaders to help provide them with the supporting facts that answer, "yes."

"Remember agriculture is our number one economic activity and we (Pennsylvania) have the largest rural population."

He said that given those basic facts, and if agricultural education is relevant to preparing youth for opportunities for the 21st century, then it will be much easier to bolster support for agricultural education.

A vision is necessary, as well as eternal vigilence in order to make it happen, he said.

That vision for the next century has to take agriculture from now through the start of the century to the end, though no one expects to live to see the end of the century.

A solid educational framework, and developing young men and women who are adaptive to change and have the skills to be adaptive and not only prepare them to grapple with immediate problems, will go a long way to maintaining a peaceful and secure world.

"We have to be better at packaing the curriculum; better at telling the agricultural story, as to why its necessary to teach young people about agriuclture.

"All of our lives have been enriched by practices first developed in agriculture and then transferred. I want to close this century in an exciting way and open the century in an exciting way, but we have to have an exciting product with vision. We must all be salesmen and marketers. We must be good advocates.

"As the new secretary of agriculture, if you will allow PDA to be with you, we will be happy to join you. I pledge not only myself, but also those who work in the department," Hayes said.

He added that his most recent appointment to deputy secretary was based largely, though not solely, on the person's background of agricultural education. He said the other two deputies also have degrees in agricultural education. He said that now is the best time for agriuclturaI education to be movéd forward.

Hayes said that the importance of agriculture is much more than having jobs and low food prices — he said it is critical to maintaining freedom and peace.

"A nation that wants to live free is best positioned to do so if it has strong agriculture and can clothe and feed its people."

Southeast Pennsylvania's Fellowship Of Christian Farmers Sets Aug. 23 Picnic

WRIGHTSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Southeast Pennsylvania's chapter of Fellowship of Christian Farmers (FCF) International will host its annual summer picnic, Saturday, Aug. 23, at Samuel Lewis State Park, east of York and south of Wrightsville, Pa.

Farmers, family, friends and people involved in greater agriculture in southeast Pennsylvania are cordially invited, says Donald L. Hershey, president of the chapter. Hershey, a Manheim area dairyman, encourages spouses and family members to attend. "If you have friends who might benefit from a special time of celebration, inspiration and encouragement, please ask them to join you."

The event returns to the scenic park overlooking the western shore of the Susquehanna River after last year's successful picnic. Music and inspiration will be provided by the Goodville Gospelaires. Personal testimonies will also be given by several people in agriculture.

FCF will provide a beef barbecue meal, for $7 per adult, $5 per child between 5 and 12 years of age and free for children under age five.

Reservations should be made by Friday, Aug. 15, by calling Hershey at (717) 665-3808 or David Bitler (610) 944-0541.

To get to the park, take the Wrightsville exit off U.S. 30. Follow the signs south.

Fellowship of Christian Farmers, International is one of the fastest growing agricultural groups in the United States. Only 12 years old, it includes close to 12,000 farmers and agribusiness persons. More than 1,200 Pennsylvanians are now part of the six Keystone State chapters affiliated with the national group.

FCF is dedicated to building and strengthening the Christian faith among farm families and friends in agriculture. The group also undertakes many mission projects to disaster-stricken U.S. farm regions, and to Mexico, South America, Africa, eastern Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States.

NCFC Applauds Provisions In Taxpayers Relief Act

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Council of Farmer Cooperatives today applauded the long-awaited agreement between the Clinton Administration and congressional leaders on the Taxpayers Relief Act of 1997.

"Farmers will do well under this tax bill," said NCFC President David Graves. "It provides important tax relief to agricultural producers in several key areas." The bill contains many provisions on which NCFC actively worked, including:

Capital Gains — Top capital gains cut from 28 percent to 20 percent, and for lower incomes the rate drops from 15 percent to 10 percent. Rates apply to regular and alternative minimum tax with a presumed effective date of May 7, 1997. The agreement also retains the House provision to offset capital gains with ordinary losses. After 2000, a special 18 percent rate (8 percent for taxpayers in the 15 percent tax bracket) would apply to assets held five years or more.

Estate Taxes — Increased the unified credit from $600,000 to $1.0 million over the next 10 years. Indexes gift, special use valuation, and generation skipping transfer exemptions beginning in 1999, and excludes up to $1.3 million of qualified family farms and businesses annually effective in 1998. The family farm and business exclusion would be in the form of a credit beginning at $700,000 and would be phased down to $300,000 as the unified credit increases. Also allows an exclusion from a taxable estate up to 40 percent of the value of any land subject to a qualified conservation easement and coordinated with the exclusion of family farms and businesses at a level phased in at $100,000 per year increments up to $500,000. Creates a 20-year installment plan for the payment of estate taxes on closely held businesses, including farms.

AMT Deferred Payment Contracts — Includes NCFC-supported position that for purposes of computing the alternative minimum taxable income, taxpayers may use the installment method of accounting.

Ethanol Tax Credit — Maintains the ethanol tax credit, which expires in 2000, with no budget implications.

Farmer Cooperative Provision — Extends the deferral provided under section 1042 of the Code to the sale of stock of a qualified refiner or processor to an eligible farmer's cooperative.

Income Averaging for Farmers — Provides farm income averaging in 1998 and 1999.

Deducation for Self-Employed Health Insurance — Increases the health insurance deducation to 80 percent by 2006. The current deduction is 40 percent.

Livestock Treatment Due to Adverse Weather — Allows farmers forced to sell livestock due to adverse weather to include income from the sale in the following year.

Kerosene Taxed as Diesel — Extends the tax treatment of diesel to kerosene, except for kerosene used in Alaska or for home heating.

One provision not included in the compromise package was the earned income credit on livestock, which would have allowed farmers who raise dairy cattle and hogs and are otherwise eligible to receive the credit.

The House is expected to consider the measure today and the Senate is expected to consider it tomorrow. Once both houses have approved the bill, the President is expected to sign it.

The National Council of Farmer Cooperatives is a nationwide association of cooperative businesses owned and controlled by farmers. Its membership includes more than 110 major farmer marketing, supply, and credit cooperatives, and state councils of cooperatives.

NCFC members handle almost every type of agricultural commodity produced in the U.S., market these commodities domestically and abroad, and furnish production supplies and credit to their farmer members. The Council's members, in turn, represent nearly 4,000 local cooperatives with a combined membership that includes most of the nearly two million U.S. farmers.

The Precision Of White, The Ease Of Central Fill.

Central Fill Planters.

With the White 6800 Series planters, you get accurate seed placement, precise depth control, narrow row spacing, and central fill convenience in one planter. Its unique rigid frame positions row units at 30" for corn and 15" for soybeans and 10" for soybeans, wheat and other seed. The convenient seed meter control lets you adjust the seeding rate as you go, matching seed population to the yield potential of the soil.

Up to three gangs of row units power through thick, standing stalks and other heavy residue, while accurately and gently placing seed in the ground. A large, 35 bushel, single seed hopper is quicker to fill than individual row units, and it's more cost-efficient.

To see how your operation can benefit from the most advanced planting system available, stop by your AGCO® White Planter dealer today.

Field Day Features New Techniques

HOLTWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — More than 150 farmers and researchers from five states gathered at Cedar Meadow Farm in southern Lancaster County on July 19 to observe some of the latest techniques in sustainable agriculture.

Steve and Cheri Groff of Holtwood hosted the 4th annual event to showcase what they are doing to increase profits, save soil, and reduce the use of pesticides.

"I don't want to tell anyone how they have to operate their farm," said Groff in his opening remarks. "But I want to show a model that has worked for us. Hopefully you can adapt something to your farm from what you see here."

A research project funded by SARE (Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education — USDA), comparing 15 inch row corn vs. 30 inch row corn attracted the interest of corn growers. Dr. Greg Roth, Penn State University corn specialist, discussed the current data he has gathered on this subject and answered questions from the attendees.

"Narrow row corn can give a small yield increase in both grain and silage corn and also the quicker canopy closure helps control late season weed growth," he said. "The limiting factors are narrow-row planting and harvesting equipment as well as applying post emergent sprays and side-dressing of N."

The Lancaster County Conservation District demonstrated a Global Positioning System receiver they are beginning to use in developing contour strips on area farms.

Joel Gruver, soil quality researcher from the University of Maryland, held the group in rapt attention as he demonstrated the difference in soil aggregation from fields. Each of the three samples were sifted to leave particles of soil ¼ inch in diameter (aggregates) and then placed in small glass jars. Water was poured into the jars containing the soil and stirred. The aggregates in the long term no-tilled soils remained intact while the aggregates from the soil that was recently tilled fell apart and turned to mud.

"This is a simple test that any farmer can do to actually see the stability of the soils on his farm," said Gruver. "The better aggregation a soil has, the more water it can absorb and the less susceptible it is to erosion during heavy rainstorms."

Cover crops and their role in crop production was handled by Dr. Ron Morse, Virginia Tech, and Steve Groff, owner of Cedar Meadow Farm.

"The implementation of cover crops on our farm has helped build soil tilth, decrease weed pressure, and control soil erosion," claimed Groff. "I'm fine-tuning the different mixes based on the succeeding crop to be planted."

Morse reviewed the various methods of controlling covers — mowing, rolling, and herbicides — and discussed the pros and cons of each. The many examples of cover crops that could be observed in Groff's fields generated numerous questions from the audience.

Residue management was addressed by Joel Myers, Natural Resource Conservation Service. He displayed an exhibit that portrayed various percentages of surface residue to give farmers an idea of how their fields measure up.

The highlight of the day was the demonstration of varoius no-tillage planters, drills, and implements. Groff showed how his rolling stalk chopper controls cover crops and then immediately no-tilled broccoli into the rolled forage soybeans. Seven different brands of no-till drills then planted into wheat stubble, including one drill capable of being pulled by horses.

"This is the greatest variety of equipment I've ever seen at a farm field day," said one of the equipment dealers.

Andy and Sue Williamson, Jefferson, Maine, commended, "We drove all the way from Maine to see the rolling stalk chopper in action. It might have a place on our farm."

Steve debuted his new video, "No-Till Vegetables, A Sustainable Way to Increase Profit, Save Soil, and Reduce Pesticides," during the field day.

From the left, Brad Hoover holds the halter of his FFA reserve senior Brown Swiss, while Garrett Mase holds the halter of his senior and grand champion.

PA Farm Bureau Supports 'Homestead' Referendum

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The leader of a statewide farm organization today voiced support for a "yes" vote on the "Homestead" referendum question in this fall's election.

Guy Donaldson, president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, said passage of the homestead property tax exemption will be "a step toward a fairer taxation system." Donaldson spoke at a news conference in the state Capitol Building along with representatives of other groups supporting the "Homestead" referendum including the Pennsylvania State Grange, the American Association of Retired Persons and the League of Women Voters.

One of the questions on the Nov. 4th ballot will be whether the Pennsylvania Constitution should be amended to permit a "homestead" exemption. If approved, the General Assembly would be able to enact legislation allowing local taxing authorities to exclude from real estate taxes a portion of the assessed value of a person's home. The exemption would be limited to no more than one-half of the median assessed value of all homesteads within the taxing jurisdiction.

"Communities demand new programs and services, however tax laws place a cap on the income taxing authority to pay for them," Donaldson said. Local governments are then forced to rely heavily on property taxes. Unfortunately, Donaldson said, property is "not a good measure of a taxpayer's ability to pay local taxes. As a result, senior citizens, farmers and other persons with fixed incomes bear an unfair tax load."

The homestead property tax exemption, Donaldson said, "will give local governments flexibility and the authority to provide relief to residential property owners. Any offsetting taxes would be based on the taxpayer's ability to pay."

Passage of the homestead property tax exemption referendum this November, "sends a meaningful message to the taxpayer that we are moving toward property tax relief," Donaldson said. "A 'Yes' vote will give local government more flexibility and fairer means to raise the necessary funds to operate."

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is a non-governmental, voluntary organization which represents 25,207 farm and rural families statewide.

Indiana Couple Wins Young Breeder Award

BELOIT, Wis. — Jeffery and Dee Dee Hendress of Wolcott, Indiana, were the recipients of the 1997 Brown Swiss Young Breeder Award presented July 11, during the national convention in Cleveland, Ohio.

The winners were chosen based on expertise in dairy farming and Brown Swiss cattle breeding, participation in the Brown Swiss Cattle Breeders' Association programs and events, and community leadership roles.

The Hendresses own Hoosier Knoll Farm where they maintain a herd of 171 registered Brown Swiss. The herd began Production and Type Performance Registry testing in the 1950s and currently has a rolling herd average of 17,694M 760F 673P on 96 cows. Forty of the 96 cows in the milking herd are family members of the first Brown Swiss herd Jeff started with in 1970.

Doug Kuhn, president of the Indiana Brown Swiss Association, nominated the couple for the award stating, "I have had the pleasure of knowing Jeff and Dee Dee Hendress for several years. I am confident that you will not find a more dedicated dairy farm couple who is solely committed to the Brown Swiss cow and that works diligently every day to produce a product of the highest quality, whether that be in milk in the tank for public consumption, or breeding stock that will provide other breeders with a good foundation for success."

The couple has seen steady production growth each year with last year's herd average at 16,268M 719F 614P. Their new goal of 18,000 pounds seems attainable in the near future. Their progressive breeding has turned an average heifer into a family of cows that has won top protein and production awards, multiple Excellents and All-American nominations.

Century Farm Is Apple Of Their Eye

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

ORTANNA (Adams Co.) — Apples and history are inseparately entwined at the Lowell Pepple family's Century Farm.

Nestled near the base of Adams County's South Mountains, the Pepple farmstead sits amid near rows of apple trees that march along the foothills. Lowell Pepple, born 61 years ago in the only house he has ever called home, is as deeply rooted in this picturesque setting as the fruit trees he so carefully nurtures.

"I like it," he simply shrugs, as the reason for devoting his lifetime to the orchard business. "I like to take care of the trees."

And then he adds with a grin: "I've spent 75 percent of my life in a tree." Plus a few times, he'll wryly admit, when he was tumbled out of them.

Pepple is the fourth-generation of his family to cultivate this stony, hilly ground at the base of the Appalachians. His great-grandfather, Isaac Pepple, purchased the original farmstead of 54 acres in 1845, at the total cost of $540. Succeeding him in making a life off the land was his son, Calvin, and his wife Catherin. Their son, Raymond, and his wife, Kathryn, were Lowell's parents.

A stack of deeds kept by Pepple and his wife, Nancy, tell the story of the farm's passage through the generations. One small addition of three acres of woodlot property was acquired long ago — at the cost of $3.65 per acre. A larger addition made by Lowell Pepple in 1981 added yet another 40 acres of woodland. He cleared it, then planted more fruit trees. The orchard's present 97 acres produce primarily apples, with five-plus acres in peaches, a small planting of table and prune plums, and a few sweet cherry trees.

But the Pepple homestead was not always devoted to orchards. Isaac's production was the more traditional general farm of the mid-19th century, with crops like small grains and corn, and a few head of cattle and hogs. The first fruit trees were planted about the turn of the century.

Even during his childhood, Lowell recalls, the family's farming was split between row crops, some livestock and fruit production. Some of his earliest memories are of helping to farm with the family team of horses. And vividly imprinted in his mind is the first tractor, a Caterpillar crawler-type, that arrived at the Pepple farm when he was 11 years old. Though initially intimidated by the new type of horsepower, the youngster soon adapted to tractor power for operating the orchard sprayer, and mowing equipment.

"We always had apples and peaches," says Pepple. "At one time we had 20 acres of peaches. That was too many. When it gets hot, peaches 'melt' and fall off the trees; when they're ready, you have to get them off right away. We also used to have sour cherries, but the price for them got so bad we got out."

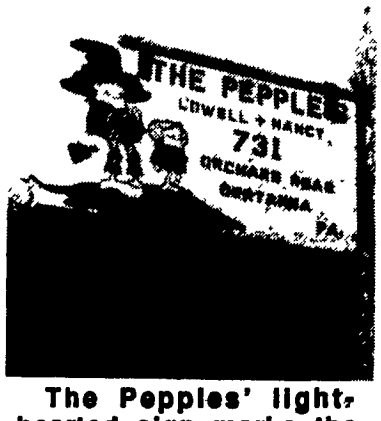
After he graduated from high school and joined the operation full-time in 1954, it was Lowell who encouraged the conversion of the acreage from row crops to orchard production. He had found that he preferred working with the trees to livestock and other crops.

"You needed two sets of equipment for those two different types of operations. And they both needed attention at the same time, such as cherries ripening when it was time to bale straw. I just preferred the fruit farming." The long-term planting of trees also reduces the erosion to which these hills are prone when heavy rains mix with freshly-tilled soils.

Today, there are more trees producing in the same acreage in the Pepple orchards, due to improved varieties. Once planted at 35x35-feet intervals and towering up to 40-feet tall, today's more compact trees set in 25x20-feet spacings and only reach about half that height.

"Smaller trees are easier to work with. They're less labor intensive, require less pruning and are easier to pick," Pepple says.

Amist the ripening apples in their orchard, Lowell and Nancy Pepple, holding 10-month-old grandson Jesse, display their Century Farm award. Pepple is the fourth-generation on the Ortanna-area farm.



The Pepples' light-hearted sign marks the orchard's location at the food of the foothills of southern Adams County.

While the Pepples once employed migrant labor during the busy fruit harvest season, their seasonal labor needs are currently filled by a half-dozen local workers. His nephew, Jeffrey Fissel, lives on the farm and has been a full-time employee of the orchard since graduation from high school 24 years ago.

Orchard production is a year-round operation. Pruning begins early in the year and the orchards are mowed regularly through the growing season. Spraying is done periodically as the season advances.

"On rainy days we fix whatever we broke during the good weather," Pepple quips. Picking season is always hectic, and barely over before pruning again begins.

This eyar's peach harvest was expected to begin with the first week of August, with a surpisingly good set on the trees despite unseasonably cold temperatures just before the buds opened.

"We came through the year a lot better than we thought," he says, althugh there was some freeze damage. "Based on our experience with weather, we shouldn't have any peaches at all. At 28 degrees, you expect damage. At 26 degrees, you expect severe damage. Below that, they're usually gone. We had 18 degrees here one morning while the buds were in 'pink.'"

After years of battling the weather and its potential to wipe-out an orchard crop, Pepple has a philosophical approach to worrying about unseasonable freezes: "Put an extra blanket on the bed and go to sleep. It's not use the trees and you both spend the night cold."

It was the deep-freeze of 1994 that caused one of the most serious losses ever to the peach crop. Temperatures that January dropped to minus-28 degrees in the orchards, with deep snow piled around the trees. The peach crop was wiped out.

"We had one branch that had gotten bent over and covered with snow which had a few peaches on it," the Pepples relate. "And the squirrels ate those." There were no plums that season, as well. However, the apples, which comprise the bulk of the Pepple's yield, came through the bitter cold with little damage.

Pepple attests that weather swings to greater extremes in this latter part of the century that it did in his early years as an orchardist. Hail is one of the fruit producers' most dreaded weather enemies, and one that Pepple has seen on the upswing the last few decades. In 1962, a vicious storm that swept across the mountains poured baseball-sized hail onto

HOMESTEAD NOTES

Four generations of Pepples have called this picturesque setting home. Local lore relates that area horses were hidden in nearby Jack's Hollow during the Civil War, to prevent their confiscation for military use. In the foreground, Lowell Pepple makes a pass with the sprayer through some of the Golden Delicious crop.

Lowell Pepple checks the progress of his favorite variety of apple, Golden Delicious. He prefers them at the ready-to-pick stage, when a bite into the crisp fruit makes a crunching sound.

Failing in the Fall

Having a child fail and repeat a grade is one of a parent's great fears. Parents usually have to face this anguish in the spring — and in most schools it is the parent's decision — but it's in the fall that the foundation for failure is set.

I've never met a parent who didn't want a child to like school and do well in it. Nor Have I met a child or teacher without these hopes. Yet, by the end of September children begin sorting themselves into categories — like/don't like school, can/can't do the work, have/don't have friends, like/doesn't like teacher, interesting/boring classwork. Teachers pick up on these signals early in the year but parents tend to ignore them at the most crucial time, the formative months of September and October when negative attitudes and behaviors can be redirected into healthier ones.

The red alert should go on when children who anticipate returning to school begin to show signs of disillusionment. This can be in the form of procrastination in the morning, general complaints about school as boring or unpleasant, stomach aches before school, remarks that the teacher doesn't like them and dawdling over homework. Most parents shrug these off as normal behaviors once the novelty of a new teacher and class wear off but they can be early signs of stress in the child's life.

It might be that children are having difficulty adjusting to a teacher whose methods are quite different from earlier teachers. If their last year's teacher taught in a relaxed and informal environment and this year's a more structured classroom, children can feel disoriented. It might be that children feel inferior because they can't easily grasp new concepts and skills, especially if they are perfectionist in nature. They begin to tell themselves they're dumb and, by extension, the work they are expected to do is dumb.

It might be that children feel friendless. This is a major cause of school phobia. Often such children will put on the armor of abrasiveness or withdrawal which reinforces the idea that they are unlikeable. Or it might be, as in one dramatic case, that the child was the only one in the class who couldn't climb to the top of the rope in gym class and it wrapped his whole school experience in negativity. When the stunned parents discovered that this simple failure was the cause for his increasing dislike of school, the dad took him to the recreation center and helped him get to the top of the rope. His whole attitude toward school changed.

Parents are closer to the child than teachers so it's up to the parents to search for the cause behind disillusionment which leads to behaviors which lead to failure. However, parents need not be alone in addressing the problems of kids who come to dislike school.

Many parents are fearful of approaching teachers for help when a child is unhappy but passing. This is a mistake. Requesting a teacher conference in September or October might offset a lot of anguish the next spring. Together parents and teachers can work miracles in children.

the orchards, not only stripping fruit and leaves from the trees, but bark as well. In a deafening 20 minutes, the orchards were reduced to shreds, building roofs were badly tattered and windows reduced to piles of glass.

"There is just nothing you can do about it, except to make sure you have crop insurance," acknowledges Pepple, who has watched several lesser storms wreak havoc on his fruit in the ensuing years. The Pepples have learned to recognize the pinkish or yellowish clouds that roll in over the mountains from the west and are the most likely to be laden with the destructive hail.

While weather is the biggest natural factor affecting fruit production, Pepple sees regulations as the most oppressive manmade hurdle to orchardists. Bulk of the more burdensome regulations deal either with use of chemicals or with farm labor.

"Bigger producers have bigger problems," says Pepple of the regulatory rules and restrictions. "And it will probably only get worse."

Apple harvest at the Pepple orchard starts in late summer, beginning with the Summer Rambo variety. A range of varieties follows in succession, to spread the harvest and meet marketing needs. Major varieties among the Pepple plantings include Golden Grimes, Smokehouse, Golden and Red Delicious, Jonathan, Stayman, McIntosh, Rome Beauty, and York Imperials. In a good production year, the Pepples can expect a 33,000 bushel yield from their apple plantings.

Pepple markets all his production as a member of Knouse Foods Cooperative, located nearby in Ortanna. The cooperative processes and markets a variety of value-added products from apples, peaches, and sour cherries. Applesauce, spiced apple rings and pie fillings are among Knouse Foods' Lucky Leaf-labeled products. The fried apple rings popular at the Cracker Barrel restaurant chain and Tastykake fruit pie fillings are sourced from the cooperative as well.

As the fourth-generation, Pepple is intensely interested in seeing the family's Century Farm, recognized for that status in the last few months, remain in agriculture. Taking a step to insure that houses do not replace the tidy rows of trees, the Pepples in 1992 became the third farm in Adams County to sell their development easements through the Farmland Preservation program.

"I did it so this farm could never be developed," affirms Pepple. And it was through the preservation process that he first learned of the Century Farm program.

But even with such programs, Adams County's orchards, says Pepple, are keeping with the trend of agriculture toward fewer and larger operations. While he believes that nearly every acre of ground in the orchard-intense county that can successfully support fruit trees is already planted to them, some acreage is lost every year to devleopment. As other orchardists go out of business, they are often incorporated into neighboring operations.

According to Pepple, Adams County's fruit production traces largely to the foresight of C.H. Musselman, who relocated to the area from Lancaster County in the early 1900s. Musselman initially established a cannery for vegetables, then diversified into the fruit business. The foothills of the Appalachians, and their approximate 1,000-feet-above-sea-level location proved ideal for orchard trees, which do not like wet feet and thrive in the well-drained, stony hills where air currents also fend off late frosts.

And Lowell Pepple, with his lifelong love of fruit trees, is doing everything he can to assure that at least his family's homestead remains in agriculture for another Century Farm award.

Simple And Fresh

Summertime Eating At Its Best

Summertime eating often conjures visions of corn on the cob, freshly sliced peaches, and cucumber slices.

Whether its dining alone or with guests, simple is freshest and best. It's also easy to enhance special occasions with natural beauty and simple accents that express hospitality.

Consider the classic beauty of fresh grapes. With a rich color palette of vibrant reds, lively greens, and dramatic blue-black varieties, grapes will complement almost any item on your table or around your home.

Casual or formal, with grapes the decorating ideas abound. Colorful grape clusters arranged artfully around a well-loved straw hat create a naturally festive table centerpiece that attracts attention and suits any casual gathering. Grapes can also be draped down the center of a buffet table atop ferns or other greens for a centerpiece that guests can nibble on throughout the party.

Smaller details, like inventive plate or drink garnishes, also give a stylish touch. Frosted grapes are an elegant decoration for a cheese platter or dessert, offering sweet taste and color. Add a decorative and refreshing skewer of mint leaves and grapes to a tall fruit drink.

For more ways to enhance your hospitality, write for a free copy of the new "Make Yourself At Home" booklet. It contains easy and elegantly simple ideas to enhance your home throughout the seasons. Supplies are limited, so don't delay. Send requests to Home Inspirations, c/o California Table Grape Commission, P.O. Box 27320, Fresno, CA 93729-7320.

Melons and peppers abound this time of the year. Both add flavor and nutrition.

When buying, select firm peppers that are heavy for their size. Look for peppers with a rich, glossy color.

When buying cantaloupes, select melons that have a thick netting and a rich golden color underneath. They should have a delicate aroma. Each one cup of cantaloupe contains only 35 calories and is a good source of vitamins A and C and potassium.

The following recipe, from the American Cancer Society Cookbook, combines the unique flavors of cantaloupes and peppers. This salad is spectacular as an appetizer or for lunch.

ROASTED RED PEPPER, MUSHROOM AND MELON SALAD

1 large sweet red pepper
1 head Boston lettuce
1 cantaloupe or honeydew melon
12 white mushrooms
2 tomatoes, sliced
½ pound cooked salad shrimp (optional)
1 cup orange vinaigrette

Place red pepper on a baking sheet; roast in 375 degree oven for 18 minutes; turn and roast on other side for 18 minutes longer, or until pepper is soft and blistered. Place pepper in paper or plastic bag; close bag and let peper steam for 10 minutes. Using fingernails and small knife, peel skin from pepper (it should come off easily); seed pepper and cut into strips.

Wash lettuce leaves; dry in spinner or with paper towels and refrigerate until needed. Cut melons in half; discard seeds. Peel and cut melon into wedges. Slice mushrooms.

Line eight individual salad plates with lettuce leaves. Arrange wedges of melon in center; place red pepper strips on top of melon, mushrooms on one side, tomato slices on other, and shrimp (if using) over remaining lettuce. Drizzle Orange Vinaigrette over each salad. Makes 8 appetizer servings.

ORANGE VINAIGRETTE

1 clove garlic
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
2 tablespoons white vinegar
1 teaspoon granulated sugar
½ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper
¼ cup orange juice
2 tablespoons vegetable oil

In food processor or blender, chop garlic and parsley. Add vinegar, sugar, and salt and pepper to taste; process to mix. With motor running, gradually add orange juice and oil. Makes about ½ cup.

Emily O'Hara Reigns In Maryland

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

FREDERICK, Md. — Emily O'Hara has been selected as the 1997-98 Maryland Dairy Princess. She received her tiara from outgoing Dairy Princess Sarah Bedgar at the state pageant held in Frederick at the FSK Holiday Inn. Katie Dixon, representing Maryland's Eastern Shore, was crowned as alternate state dairiy princess.

Emily is the daughter of Eddie and Kay O'Hara of Frederick. She lives on a 200-acre dairy farm where the family milks 80 registered Holsteins. Her responsibilities on the farm include helping with the milking, preparing the dairy for milking, feeding calves, replacement heifers, and steers, and assisting with herd health.

This fall she will be a senior at Frederick High School, where she is a National Honor Society student. Emily has been Frederick County dairy princess, and also a farm princess. She is president of her 4-H club, but feels her greatest accomplishment is serving as president of her FFA chapter.

"I have the opportunity to represent agriculture and teach about it," said Emily, "I get that opportunity being Frederick County Dairy Princess, too, but I feel that serving as FFA president is my greatest achievement in life thus far."

Emily's FFA activities have taken her to Kansas City for the National FFA convention for the past two years. She has won honors in floriculture, agribusiness, dairy proficiency, and extemporaneous speaking. She has also taken horticulture awards in the 4-H program, and has attended the National Junior Horticulture Association meetings at Niagara Falls and in Texas.

In addition to her work on the family farm, Emily takes courses at Frederick Community College, and also works for a florist and garden center. She would like to pursue a career in agriculture, maybe in ag communications. "I want to be a representative of agriculture somehow, and speak about it," said the Dairy Princess, "I can't wait to represent Maryland and all the dairy farmers and all their hard work."

Emily had an opportunity to do just that when she answered a fishbowl question put to her by master of ceremonies Jeff Myers, of the Maryland 4-H Foundation. When asked how she would convince the state legislators to make milk the official state drink, she cleverly responded, "By taking it away from them for a day. I'd make them realize how much we need it, and they would realize how we need to make milk our state drink."

Other special honors presented during the pageant included scrapbook, best skit, best radio spot, and Miss Congeniality. Jana Edwards, from the Eastern Shore, was honored for best scrapbook. Jana could not attend the evening's celebration.

Maryland area dairy princesses vied for the state title. From left are Amy Iager, South Central; Julie Delp, North Central; Sarah Bedgar, outgoing princess; Katie Dixon, Eastern Shore and alternate Maryland dairy princess; and Crystal Stambaugh, Carroll County. In front is Emily O'Hara, Frederick County, the new Maryland dairy princess.

Best skit went to Amy Iager, the South Central Dairy Princess. Best radio spot went to Crystal Stambaugh, Carroll County Dairy Princess. Emily O'Hara was selected Miss Congeniality, and honored with the Frances Duvall award, the Frances Kepler award, and a special presentation in honor of Ellen Arrmacost, who passed away recently. Mrs. Armacost had chaired the princess committee many years ago.

Judges for the pageant were Mrs. Jean Thomas, Delaware Dairy Princess pageant coordinator; and Mr. and Mrs. William and Lolly Lesher, dairy farmers from Bernville, Pa. who process and bottle their own milk.

QUESTION — Betty Kellicutt, Auburn, has been searching for years for a good dark rye bread recipe that tastes like bread they had in Germany. At one time, they could purchase the bread at a bakery in Benighanton, N.Y., which is now out of business. Betty believes the bread may have had a sour dough base. ANSWER — Peggy Tice and Dianna Reeves, Towanda, wanted a good salsa recipe. Thanks to Alma Wenger, Manheim, for sending her recipe included in the newly published Erisman Mennonite Church Cookbook and to Sue Pardo, Jarrettsville, Md., for sending one.

Salsa To Can

18 quart Roma tomatoes, peeled and diced
24 ounces tomato paste
12 bell peppers of various colors
3 quarts chopped onion
2 tablespoons cumin
2 tablespoons oregano
3 cups lemon juice
6 tablespoons salt
4 tablespoons chili powder
3 teaspoons garlic powder
2 tablespoons black pepper
1½ cup vegetable oil
Jalapeno or other hot peppers (to taste)

Mix together all ingredients, pack into jars and process in boiling water bath. Pints: 15 minutes. Quarts: 25 minutes.

Salsa

14 cups chopped tomatoes
3 cups onions
½ jalapeno peppers
1 cup chopped green pepper
4 tablespoons salt
4 teaspoon chili powder
4 teaspoons cumin
6 tablespoons Clear Jel
⅔ cup vinegar
1 cup tomato sauce
3 tablespoons brown sugar

Combine tomatoes, onions, green pepper, and jalapeno peppers. Mix together salt, chili powder, cumin. Add to vegetables. Cook. Mix tomato sauce, brown sugar, and Clear Jel together. Add to vegetable mixture. Mix thoroughly. Cook until thick.

Pour mixture into clean canning jars. Process in boiling water bath for 10 minutes.

Sue writes that friends and relatives ask for this recipe every year. Add extra amounts of spices if you like hot salsa.

Also, thanks to June Freed, Perkasie, for sending her recipe.

Spicy Tomato Salsa

3-4-ounce cans chopped green chiles, drained
8 pounds ripe tomatoes, peeled, chopped, drained
3 cups chopped onion
1 cup chopped sweet green pepper
¼ cup lemon juice
6 tablespoons vinegar
2 teaspoons oregano
1 tablespoon salt
2 cans tomato paste

Peel peppers by baking them at 500 degrees for 10-12 minutes or until the skins blister. Immediately, place in paper bag to cool. When cool, pull off the peels. When handling chiles, use rubber gloves (avoid touching face or eyes). Discard seeds of peppers and chop. Peel tomatoes, core tomatoes and chop. Combine peppers, chilies, tomatoes in large kettle. Add remaining ingredients. Bring to boil. Cover. Simmer for 5 minutes. Laddle into clean, hot pint jars, leaving ¼ -inch headspace. Process in hot water bath for 45 minutes or in pressure canner set at 5 pounds for 7 minutes.

ANSWER — Mrs. Kenneth Swinehart, Cochranville, wanted a recipe for making soft ice cream like that sold at Dairy Queen and Mr. Frosty. Thanks to Doreen Druist, Shirleysburg, for sending a recipe. Although the directions infer to place it in the refrigerator, I think it can be put into an ice cream freezer and made according to the manufacturer's instructions.

Dairy Queen Ice Cream

2 packages plain gelatin, soaked in ½ cup cold water
5 cups milk
2 cups granulated sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 teaspoon salt
3 cups cream

Heat (do not boil) two cups milk. Add gelatin mixture and sugar. Continue stirring until well dissolved. Remove from heat; pour remaining milk into the heated mixture. Add remaining ingredients and mix. Place in refrigerator and chill several hours until set. Flavors may be varied. Makes one gallon. This ice cream freezes less hard in the freezer than many homemade varieties.

NOTICE — Bonnie Gibble writes that she enjoys many of the recipes sent in by readers but wishes the nutritional facts such as calories, fats, and sodium would be listed for weight-conscious individuals. From time to time, we do include these if they are sent in with the recipe. We realize that more and more people appreciate this information. 1 cup ice cold water
1 pint raspberries
8-ounce container frozen whipped topping, thawed

"More flowers?" says The Farmer, eyeing a colorful handful of blooms I've carted in from the garden.

"Yep," I happily nod. It is the second bouquet of the day he's observed me plunking in a vase.

Every year, I make a real effort to plant and nurture a variety of bright annuals — and a few perennials — that lend themselves to cutting. Then, life generally gets so busy during the flowering season that I find myself zipping in and out to the garden to snatch a tomato or pepper without pausing to pluck off the posies to bring into the house to enjoy.

This year would be different, I resolved early in the season. This year I would go out of my way to keep those fresh flowers around the house or picked to share with friends. Otherwise, they just get lopped off after surpassing their peak of beauty, hidden behind some weed that popped up and obscured their color from everyone but the inquisitive bees.

Not that I begrudge the bees access to the blooming stuff on the place, mind you. But I'd like to encourage them to go pollinate the cantaloupes and watermelons in the garden. If you would, please, bees.

While formal bouquets are fine for formal settings — weddings, church, banquets — our casual house needs casual flowers. A friend with whom I often share whatever happens to be blooming at the time concurs, plunking her bouquets into an antique canning jar given to her by her mother. Just about any flower — fresh of dried — looks good in an antique canning jar.

Over the years, I've developed an affinity for using small pitchers, glass and pewter (well, fake pewter), as holders for our casual bouquets. But, certain types of flowers just don't cut it in certain types of containers. The wrong combination will ruin the whole effect, a visual disaster akin to wearing a purple and pink striped shirt with orange plaid shorts.

For instance, a dainty collection of sweet peas — in bright purples, pinks and shades of rose — just looks silly in a dark brown stoneware vase. Black-eyed Susans, on the other hand, are great in the stoneware but look tacky in dainty ceramics.

Zinnias are one of my all time favorites for casual home bouquets. And the cut and come again variety (appropriately enough), with its smaller blooms and tendency to bounce back and send up two more flowers for every one cut, is great for that use. Plopped into a fake pewter mug, souvenir of a class reunion years ago, they add a bright touch of color to the bathroom vanity.

A few stems of the herb cilantro, which blooms with tiny, white blossom clusters, adds a light, airy touch to the zinnias. The cilantro was planted with the intent of using it in making salsa, but it has matured and tried to go to seed before more than just a few small tomatoes had ripened. But, tucked in with a bouquet, the cilantro gives off an interesting scent every time something brushes against it. Besides, I cheated and bought a salsa-seasoning mix, on sale at the market, for the fresh tomatoes.

Hunting a perennial that both lent itself to cutting and tolerated dry conditions, I lucked out last year on an experiment with purple coneflowers. One seed packet yielded a few dozen hardy seedlings of the rugged flower, plenty to try out in the heat-and-dry-prone flower beds, with some left over to share.

Thriving through this season's drought conditions with only an occasional drink of water, those coneflowers now stand more than three feet tall and have bloomed continuously for the past several weeks. Their long-lasting pink-purple blossoms are so pretty and so durable I may just put the whole border at the dairy barn in them and forget trying to coax anything else along. Never mind that I have to tip-toe around the bumble bees to get to them.

A handful of the coneflowers in a small, glass pitcher is like a smile painted on the kitchen table. And, they combine well with another planting experiment, blue salvia. Blue flowers in summer are a bit hard to come by, but these will be repeated — and expanded — next year. Their spiked bloom clusters add an interesting contract to a bouquet of the coneflowers, if one doesn't mind picking up the little blue "droppings" of tiny flowers as they age.

The row of gladioli is just starting to open color on its first flowers, globe amaranth keeps sending up stalks of small, round, papery blossoms and the cutting sunflowers are covering their sturdy stalks with cheery, happy-face blooms. And I'm running out of appropriate containers.

Guess we can always drink out of paper cups.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — Verna Guzel, Canonsburg, wanted a recipe for feta cheese made with goat's milk. Thanks to Debra Shull, Landisburg, for sending a recipe.

Feta Cheese

1 gallon goat's milk
1 cup buttermilk
1 rennet tablet
1 tablespoon salt

Pasteurize (heat to 160 degrees), then cool to 86 degrees. Add the buttermilk and the rennet tablet dissolved in a little water. Stir well and let stand until the milk forms a curd. Cut the curd with a long knife into ½ -inch cubes. Heat slowly to no more than 95 degrees. Pour into a cheesecloth and allow to hang for 48 hours until cheese is firm. Feta is not pressed in a cheese press. When firm, the curd is sliced and sprinkled with salt, which is then worked in with the hands. The cheese is then returned to the cheese cloth, which is twisted and worked to expel most of the whey. After hanging another 24 hours, the ceese is placed in a cool place to form a rind and is ready to eat in 3 or 4 days.

Kids Learn Farm Safety

JINNY WILT
Adams Co. Correspondent

ARENDTSVILLE (Adams Co.) — As Buck Sneeringer, 9, walks away from a workshop promoting farm tractor safety, he stops to talk about his reasons for taking part in the first-ever Adams County 4-H Farm Safety Day Camp.

Buck, a fourth grader at Immaculate Conception Catholic School in New Oxford, said that since his neighbor lives on a farm and has cows, he thought it important that he should know a lot about safety so he'll know what to do.

Explaining further, he said, "I ride there on my bike." Then, pausing for a moment, he emphasizes that he always wears his helmet when riding his bike.

The farm safety day camp held at the South Mountain Fairgrounds near Arendtsville drew 125 youngsters between the ages of 8 and 13 years on July 23. It was organized by personnel from Adams County Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Jeanne Plotica, Adams County 4-H Agent, said additional youngsters wanted to participate in the camp, but there was only space for the 125 youths.

Among the information available to the youngsters was that from Larry Feeser Jr. of New Oxford who is trained as a Farmedic.

Also a firefighter for Irishtown Fire Co., Feeser said in mid-July his fire department put into service a 1975 mini-pumper that is the size of a pick-up truck and can go into fields where a larger piece of equipment would get stuck.

The truck is equipped with many tools and jacks often needed at the site of a farm accident. The vehicle carries three people, Feeser said.

Feeser, who also works on his family's 100-acre farm, was sent by his fire company and the Adams County Farm Bureau to Alfred State College in New York to study to become a farmedic. He is certified as a farmedic instructor and has trained 150 firefighters in the past two years on how to handle farm-related accidents.

One of the reasons he took the course was to be able to teach youngsters about farm safety.

He said most farm accidents occur in the 12 years of age and under and 65 years of age and over groups because responses are not as quick at those ages.

Accidents with tractors rank number one in his experience with entrapments and animal incidents, second and third, he said.

According to information provided by Penn State from the National Committee for Childhood Injury Prevention in 1996 children and adolescents accounted for about 20 percent of all farm fatalities, comprisig a higher proportion of the total number of nonfatal farm injuries.

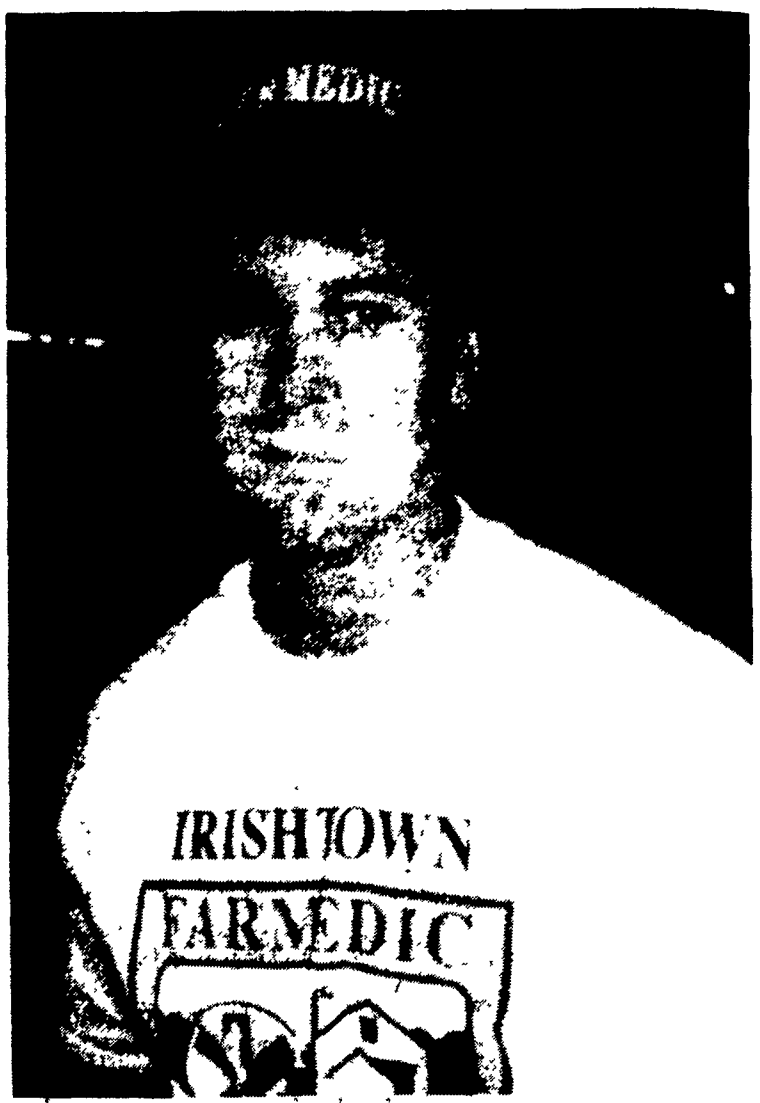
It is estimated that 27,000 children under the age of 20 who live on farms and ranches are seriously injured each year. When children who visit or work on nonfamily farms are incllluded, the total annual injury toll in estimated to be 100,000.

In Pennsylvania, 210 farm-related fatalities occurred between 1990 and 1994. Approximately 50 percent of theese fatalities were classified as occupational fatalities, mainly due to farm production work. The other deaths were considered lifestyle-related because they were from drownings and children playing in barns.

It was to alert children to these hazards that the day camp was organized.

Among the workshops available to the youngsters were those on first aid, bicycle safety, lawn mower safety, flowing grain, ATV safety, fire, and recreation.

Katy Baldwin, 9, of Biglersville, a fourth grader at Arendtsville Elementary School, who said her family, while not living on a farm, has lots of animals including chicken, cats, goats and a cow, summed up her reason for being at camp — "I want to be safe."



Larry Feeser Jr. of New Oxford is a Farmedic and a firefighter for Irishtown Fire Co., which is located near New Oxford.

Ida's Notebook

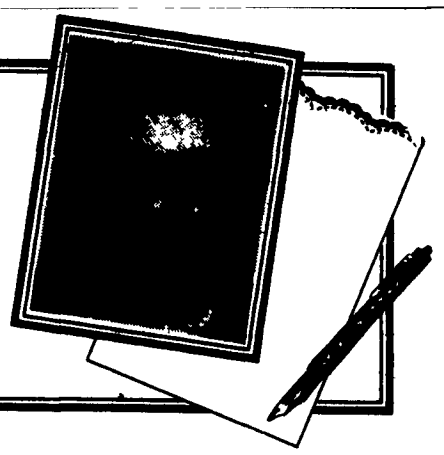
Ida Risser



Everything changes — our age, our health, and our concept of money. I grew up at a time when a nickel or a dime would buy something. Somehow, I can't adjust to today's prices.

When I got my first job in 1940, my pay was $12 for a 40-hour week. Then my next job paid $15 for 44 hours. Now people are paid as much an hour as I got for a week's work.

My mother got bread delivered to her door for 10 cents a loaf and the eggs from my chickens brought me 12 cents a dozen. This in turn barely paid for the feed that we bought for them. When my father got a Sunday newspaper he had to pay a nickel. This was considered to be an extravagance by my mother.

During the first years of my marriage, we took three children to the dentist and got a bill for $15. Recently, I had a broken tooth which cost me $1,000 to replace. Long ago, I'm sure it would simply have been pulled, and I would have had a gaping hole in my mouth. Prices like these really disturb me.

As an example of our general affluence these days, I'll tell you about a bridal shower that I attended. It was held under the shade of large trees with the 40 some guests seated at picnic tables. Despite being outside, there were lots of decorations everywhere. The bride-to-be opened large and a few small gifts for hours.

Most of the gifts were the kind that one would have expected for a wedding a few decades ago. There was a crystal vase, expensive place settings for 12, a braided rug, coffee maker, crock pot, toaster, and a large gas grill plus so much more.

It seems that we expect more and more money for our labor. We want more conveniences for our homes and one wonders where it will all end.

Son Brings Optimism And Degree Back From College

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — Larry Goss of Decatur Township, Mifflin County, has a good overall view of dairying. To look back, he simply remembers the story of how his parents started farming in 1945, putting $100 towards a 10-cow, 123-acre farm, and $100 towards a team of horses. To look forward, he simply looks across the kitchen table at his son Jason. Jason is now a managing part of Goss Farms, after graduating from Penn State in December with a degree in dairy animal science.

"Farming seemed simple then," Larry says in reference to when his parents began farming. "They just put feed in the cows and milk came out. Now feed costs are eating profits. Back then, you could pay the bills. That's less certain now."

Goss Farms now encompasses 800 acres (400 owned, 400 rented) and a 250-cow milking herd. It supports four full time incomes — Larry, his brother Mark, Jason and hired man Chad Renninger — plus an assortment of helpers. Larry and Mark's father, Guy, helps milk at least once a day. Jason's sister Megan feeds calves during the summer.

Through the years, Goss Farms has started and stopped using services such as DHIA and artificial insemination. "DHIA was too costly years ago," Larry explains. 'And I got tired of the repeat services with AI."

Since Jason's return, Goss Farms again employs DHIA, calls an AI technician occasionally, and has split the herd.

"I needed a way to better monitor individual cows," Jason says. "DHIA is more user-friendly now. Since we can't get more money for our milk, we have to improve the bottom line. We needed to see which cows were paying for the feed. We wanted to group the herd, and the DHIA information helped.

"I knew right away I wanted to do something different with the feeding program," Jason says of coming home. "It's the number one cost of producing milk."

Jason Goss, came home from college with more then a degree. With the help of his dad, Larry, he wants to take Goss Farms more profitably into the next century.

Feeding Program

Of the 800 acres, the Goss's plant 380 of alfalfa and 390 of corn. As an experiment this year, they've planted 35 acres of soybeans, mainly to reduce feed mill costs. They milk 250 cows twice a day in a double seven herringbone with automatic takeoffs. Larry rises at 2:15 each morning for the 2:30 milking. They average 18,000 pounds of milk, have sold milk to Atlantic for 25 years, and run a separate feeding program for the high and low group.

Mark ensures that top quality forages are harvested. He's also responsible for mixing the rations for the high and low groups. Both groups get haylage, corn silage, high moisture corn and 48% soymeal. The high group gets a topping of roasted beans and a fat supplement from Agway.

"It was costing us too much in minerals and protein to feed one herd," Jason says. "We took $900 off the mineral bill per month and with better results (milk)."

Jason consults his Spartan computer program to balance the rations. He says that even in this short of time, each cow is now averaging five pounds of milk more than before. He expects that to get better. The dry cows are fed 15 pounds of corn silage, their own mineral mixture for TMR, and free choice round bale hay.

Guy Goss milks in the evenings when his sons and grandsons are busy in the fields.

Megan Goss helps by feeding the calves over the summer.

Breeding

"In the past, we've purchased bulls with excellent pedigrees from Mike Ammon near Lewistown. We've gotten some nice heifers from them," Larry says. "Our facilities are better for bulls, but we're now getting back into AI."

"Our product is milk," Jason adds. "We don't want to jeopardize feed and legs, but a cow doesn't have to be pretty to be profitable."

Jason estimates that 10 percent of the herd is registered. Larry and Judy's children, Jason, Erin, and Megan, show 4-H dairy animals. He plans to keep the better pedigreed animals registered, but isn't concerned about having fully registered herd.

The Future

Larry's optimism for dairying is tempered with caution while Jason believes it will get better for the next generation — if they manage properly. While Larry has no desire to milk more cows, Jason believes it's the only way.

"If the profit per cow keeps shrinking, we'll have to milk more cows," Jason reasons. "You have to accept that."

Eventually Jason would like to add another freestall barn, install fence-line feeding, improve overall animal housing. They've outgrown the two freestalls barns, one built in the 1960s, the other in 1991. The loafing pen for dry cows is in the same building as the newer freestall, causing "challenges in the feeding department." They store corn silage in two 45x100 bunker silos, haylage in three 20x72 uprights, and high moisture corn in a 20x72 and an 18x72. A round bale barn, machine shed, young heifer barn and a parlor in the bank barn round out the buildings at Goss Farms.

For now, Jason and Larry agree that smart management of the basics at Goss Farms is the best way to get more milk per cow. All dairy farmers can agree with Mark — he wishes for higher milk prices.

Goss Farms located in Mifflin County is farmed by three generations.

Lancaster Society 8

Lancaster Society of Farm Women No. 8 met on July 16 at the Landis Homes in Lititz. Nelly Blake gave devotions and hostesses were Nellie Blake, Vera Frey, and Evelyn Russell. A short business meeting was given by Arlene Witman, president.

Members were entertained by residents Margaret Nissly who played several selections on her vibraharp. A member of the administrative department presented a slide program showing the facilities of the home and its history.

The September 10 meeting will be at Donegal Presbyterian Church in Mount Joy at noon. Members are to bring a covered dish and their place setting.

Berks Society 6

The Berks Society of Farm Women group #6 meeting for June was at the home of Linda Youse. Becky Ruppert, Berks County alternate dairy princess, was guest speaker. She presented her skit "A Dairymen's Prayer" that promotes the importance of milk. Members also identified various dairy products.

Jante Schlegel and Pearl Hoffman visited Chester County Farm Women this month. The recipient of Group #6's scholarship this year was Oley Valley High School graduate Shane Rothenberger from the class of '97.

Pearl Hoffman was hostess for game night during the July meeting. Various guessing games and word scrambles organized by Barb Kelchner were enjoyed by everyone.

The next meeting will be a picnic at the home of Mary Jane Hetrick.

Gardening With Black Walnut Trees

Gardeners traveling to Ag Progress days will pass many gardens planted under the shade of black walnut trees. Gardeners with large walnut trees near vegetable gardens play double jeopardy. Many vegetables wilt and die to a compound excreted from their roots.

The black walnut, Juglans nigra, is an American tree with a beautiful wood grain and a nut that has a powerful acidic flavor. It is hardy to zone 4, can grow as high as 100 feet, and is unusually attractive to fall webworms.

Black walnuts are found on deep soil, in river valleys, in fence rows and near streams. The trees do not thrive when crowded by other trees and are generally found growing in the open or in small groups of trees.

Black walnuts require cross pollination. They are, as other nut trees, wind pollinated.

Several problems are common to black walnuts. One is failure of the nuts to fill. This may be caused by lack of sufficient mineral elements in the soil, insufficient food reserves in the tree, such as may be caused by early defoliation, and possibly by heredity. The nuts may be damaged by husk maggots, which are small worms feeding chiefly in the green husks. A leaf spot often causes early defoliation.

Another drawback of the black walnut is its effect on neighboring plants caused by a compound called juglone. Chemically, juglone is a napthaquinone, which is used in treating certain skin diseases. The toxin is found in the fruit, leaves, branches and roots of Black walnut and butternut trees. Juglone is concentrated in the roots during the summer. As the crop matures, juglone is concentrated in the hulls of the fruit. A fatal antagonism exists between black walnuts and apple trees, tomatoes, potatoes, and eggplant. In late summer, affected plants wilt, turn yellowish, become stunted and eventually die. Tomato plants wilt suddenly.

Other plants which do not survive in the root spread of a black walnut are rhododendron, azalea, laurel, blueberry and other members of the Heath family, most pines particularly red pine, hemlocks, arborvitae, sweetgum, American holly and black ash. Blackberries die, yet black raspberries thrive. Ill effects have also been noted in alfalfa, peas, peppers, potentilla, asiatic lilies, columbine, viburnum and some varieties of tulip and narcissus.

Black walnut trees typically do not hinder the growth of grasses and some herbs and woody plants. These friends of the black walnut include: wild rose, spice bush, black raspberry, wild grape, Virginia creeper, clover, mints, fleabane, thistle, violet, ferns, asters, goldenrod, ironweed, and many types of grasses. These plants and others lilke sweet corn can be found grown under or near black walnut trees. For flower gardeners, plant shade tolerant annuals and perennials like impatiens, hostas and ferns. For a complete list of black walnut tree friends, contact your Extension Office.

Gardeners who have large walnut trees near their vegetable gardens should consider alternate sites. The greatest concentration of juglone in the soil exists within the dripline of the trees. Vegetable gardens in this area will undoubtedly experience problems. Plants susceptible to juglone are occasionally damaged well beyond the dripline as the roots of walnuts may extend 2 to 3 times the crown radius (the distance from the trunk to the dripline). Volunteer walnut seedlings which appear in or near the garden should be removed. Walnut leaves and other plant debris, which may accumulate in the garden, should be raked and removed. Sawdust or wood chips derived from walnuts should not be applied as a mulch around susceptible plants.

Schuylkill County Fair Flourishes With Volunteers

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

SUMMIT STATION (Schuylkill Co.) — "You've never seen such a bunch of hard working individuals," Craig Morgan said of the people who work behind the scenes to make Schuylkill County Fair a success.

Fourteen years ago Morgan, who was then the county 4-H extension coordinator, longed to see a local fair established where 4-H'ers could compete in livestock shows and be rewarded for their efforts. With the help of many 4-H leaders and other interested people, Schuylkill County Fair was birthed.

"People said it couldn't be done," Morgan said of the many obstacles to overcome. But he is proud to report that the 76-acres purchase of a former campground was paid in full within five years of purchase. A bordering six-acre farm was purchased last year.

Although the property offers ideal space and many new buildings have been erected to meet the needs of the annual fair, that isn't what makes Morgan most proud.

"We have ideal livestock shows—dairy, sheep, goats, hogs, horse, and beef. Last year we were the first in the state to offer a new category—dairy beef, which are dairy calves raised to 400-600 pounds and sold during the livestock sale."

Before we had nothing. Now we have everything because so many people volunteer their time and handle the entire thing. Smiles are the only payment they get, but it's worth it," Morgan said.

Many of the volunteers plan family vacations around fair week. They work on the grounds day and night to keep things running smoothly.

"I move in for the week," Elaine Kennedy, board chairman, said. That includes sleeping on the grounds. Her enthusiasm and many others who give the fair top priority is evident.

Several families such as the Kurtz family have three generations working together on the fairgrounds. Steve Kurtz is now fair president, his mother Fern keeps things running smoothly in the dairy barns, where 215 entries are housed. Son Brad is the dairy superintendent, and sons Tom and Grant help out wherever needed.

Fair volunteers strive to produce a family-oriented fair that is affordable. On a good day, 3,000 people attend the fair, where adult admission costs $4 and 12 and under are free.

In addition to livestock shows, the midway, and food galore, entertainment includes gospel, polka, country and oldies groups. Activities include such things as tractor pulls, big wheel races, pet dress up, pie eating contests, hom-

These cooks provided many of the recipes for the Schuylkill County Fair Cookbook. Used as a fundraiser for the fair, the cookbook includes many of the prize-winning fair entries in addition to favorites from the community. ing pigeon release, straw maze, threshing demonstrations, paper frog jumping, Jell-O and ice cream eating contests, milk chugging contest, hog-o-rama, and much more.

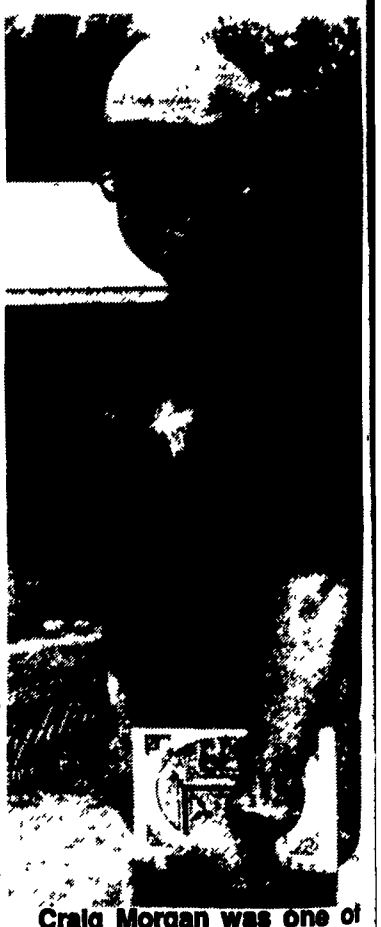
Rita Lehman of Schuylkill Haven purchases a funnel cake made by Jefferson County Grange members, Claude Riegle, Ruth Schwenk, Alice Wenrich, Emma Kore, and Tina Kore.

Peeling peaches for a week may not be everyone's idea of fun, but Ina Evanchalf gladly offers her services.

Of all the food available, Dave Walters, 13, prefers mozzarella cheese sticks.

This gang just keeps peeling and peeling day after day to provide fresh peaches for the fresh peach sundaes, for which Schuylkill County Fair is noted.

Elaine Kennedy, fair board chairman, devotes round-the-clock time to keep things running smoothly for the week-long fair.



Craig Morgan was one of the persons who was instrumental in establishing the Schuylkill Fair.

Schuylkill County Fair

Now the manager of the county's conservation district, Morgan always sets aside time for the week-long fair, which was held this year from Aug. 3-9.

Schuylkill has won two state outstanding fair awards, selected from 40 other fairs in zone 2.

Three generations in the Kurtz family volunteer time and energy to make the fair successful. Fair President Steve Kurtz, center, stands with his mother Fern Kurtz who works in the dairy barn where his son Brad, left, is dairy superintendent. Sons Tom, 19, and Grant, 17, help out wherever needed.

Nice thing about the Schuylkill Fair is that one can find a spot to relax and blow bubbles.

Lancaster County 4-H'ers Compete At State Days

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Forty-three hot and tired but happy 4-H'ers returned to Lancaster County after competing with members from other counties during 4-H State Days. The three-day annual event, held July 29-31 at Penn State University, is highly competitive, with participants needing to qualify on the regional level before advancing to state.

This year's competition was among 1,200 members from around the state.

Kandi Mullen, summer intern at the Lancaster 4-H office, said, "We had fewer and younger members from our county competing this year, but we excelled in livestock judging, especially in horse judging."

Both junior and senior teams from Lancaster County placed second in state horse judging competition. Junior team members included Amber Swinehart, Manheim; Lindsay Shreiner, Manheim; and Erin Rife, Lititz. Senior team members were Amber Weidler, Lititz; Lori Hockenberry, Manheim; Erin Smith, Lititz; and Troy Styer, Reinholds.

County individuals who placed first in the state included Erin Rife, first in junior horse judging; Radell Peters, Middletown, first in junior meat judging; and Kelly Sullivan, first in hippology. Geoff Rohrer, Manheim, placed second in livestock judging.

The lone countian who placed in the top 10 for Fashion Revue was Jenny Hoover of Denver.

Jessica Schmidt, Drumore; Dale Livengood, Lancaster; and Sara Strickler, Quarryville, made up the first-place team in meats judging during 4-H State Days.

The senior hippology team placed second: Sarah Kerker, Elizabethtown; Kelly Sullivan, Lititz; Laura Henssler, Mohnton; and Carol Hollingsworth, Lititz.

In public speaking, Jimmy Mullen, Peach Bottom, was a finalist in senior division competition.

Carroll County Holds Farm Queen Coronation

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

WESTMINSTER, Md. — Outgoing Carroll County Farm Queen Barbara Green passed her crown on to Jessica Fritz Monday evening at the county Farm Queen contest. The contest, held in conjunction with the Carroll County 4-H and FFA Fair, took place in the dairy ring at the ag center.

Amanda Holland, daughter of Thomas and Rita Holland of Westminster, was named alternate farm queen.

Jessica has had lots of experience promoting agriculture and milk. As Alternate Carroll County Farm Queen in 1995 and Alternate State Dairy Princess in 1996-97, she has travelled throughout the state as a spokesperson for the industry.

Seventeen-year-old Jessica is the daughter of Daniel and Sharon Fritz. The family lives on a 150-acre dairy farm in New Windsor, where they milk registered Holsteins. Jessica's chores on the farm include caring for the calves from birth to wearning, helping with herd checks, relief milking, and unloading hay and straw.

A recent graduate of Francis Scott Key High School, Jessica was a member of the National Honor Society, and was an Honorable Mention Distinguished Scholar. This fall she will attend the University of Maryland, with a major in animal science.

Jessica has been active in 4-H for nine years, and is a member of the Carroll County 4-H Dairy Club. She raises and shows Holstein calves and heifers, and, in fact, will take time out of her busy fair week schedule as Queen to show a Holstein heifer this week. She has participated in dairy bowl for eight years, and in 1996 travelled to Louisville for the national competition. Her 4-H dairy record book was selected top record book in the state in 1995.

In 1995 Jessica was a member of the Maryland dairy judging team that went to Madison, Wisconsin for the national competition. At Madison she placed first in oral reasons with the highest score ever, and third overall. The team from Maryland went on to win at the national level, earning the opportunity to move to the next level of competition, the Royal Highlands Show in Scotland.

She has been active in the Francis Scott Key FFA, serving as reporter, vice-president, and president. Through her FFA experiences she has garnered numerous wins in dairy judging and public speaking. She was named outstanding FFA member for 1997.

The contest is sponsored by Maryland Farm Bureau. Bill Rasche, representing MFB, presented scholarships to Jessica Fritz and Christina Harper to pursue their educations in agriculture.

Chairperson of the queen committee is Susan Meyers. Judges were Jean Fender, director of the Maryland Jersey Cattle Club, Randy Ripley, manager at Baugher's farm market in Westminster, and Laura Kaminsky, of MFB. Jeff Myers of the Maryland 4-H Foundation served as master of ceremonies.

How Long Is Food Safe After Power Outage?

NEWARK, Del. — "Food stored in the refrigerator or freezer can deteriorate quickly when the power goes out," says Dr. Sue Snider, Cooperative Extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Delaware. "And the appearance of odor of a food does not always indicate whether it is safe to eat."

Food in a refrigerator is generally safe if the power is out for less than four to six hours, says Snider. The exact length of time depends on how cold the refrigator is when the power goes off, how warm the room is and how often the refrigerator doors is opened.

Bacteria that cause foodborne illness multiply rapidly on food kept at room temperature. Some foods, such as fresh fruits and vegetables, fruit jucies, hard and processed cheeses, and butter and margarine will last at room temperature for a few days. Others lose quality and spoil more rapidly.

The following perishable foods should be discarded if kept above refrigerator temperature — 40 degrees Fahrenheit — for more than two hours:

- raw or cooked meat, poultry, seafood
- milk, cream, yogurt, soft cheese
- cooked pasta, pasta salads
- custard, chiffon, or cheese pies
- fresh eggs, egg substitues
- meat or cheese-topped pizza, luncheon meats
- casseroles, stews, soups
- creamy dressings or sauces
- refrigerated cookie dough
- cream-filled pastries

Frozen items probably will remain frozen for 24 to 72 hours if the freezer door is kept closed, says Snider. Just how long foods will take to defrost depends on the freezer site and temperature, and the kind and amount of food. Frozen meat will stay colder than baked goods. Items in a full freezer will stay frozen for at least two days, while those in a half-loaded freezer may not stay frozen more than a day. And the larger the freezer, the longer the food stays frozen.

To keep frozen foods from defrosting, leave the freezer door closed. Opening the door greatly reduces the time food stays frozen without power, Snider says. Putting dry ice into the freezer is another way to keep the temperature down. Placing blankets or quilts over the feezer adds extra insulation.

When the power returns, immediately check the temperature and condition of the food before refreezing. Be especially careful with items that are not thoroughly heated before eating. Throw out any food on which juices from raw meat, poultry, fish or shellfish have dripped.

Snider gives the following guidelines for foods that have thawed completely:

- Refreeze fruits. If they are beginning to ferment, they're still safe to eat but the flavor will be changed. Use them in cooking.
- Refreeze vegetables or cook and serve immediately, because quality loss will occur.
- Check each meat and poultry package separately. You may safely refreeze meat if it still contains ice crystals, or if it has been thawed less than 48 hours and has been kept cold — 40 degrees F or less. Discard stuffed poultry or meat.
- Toss out fish and shellfish (such as shrimp, crabs and lobster) unless ice crystals remain on the product.
- Refreeze baked goods and nuts.
- Do not use or refreeze melted ice cream.

Refreeze foods as quickly as possible, says Snider. Turn the temperature control to the coldest position and make sure that air can circulate around the packages of food. If possible, place warmer packages against the freezer surfaces. Mark refrozen packages so you will know to examine them before preparing.

ANSWER — Rose Diehl, Bloomsburg, has a dog that, itches, scratches, and chews himself. The vet said he has dry skin and she wanted to know what to do. Ellen Cohnman, Carlisle, writes that she had the same problem with her Jack Russell terrier until she started feeding her Hill's Science Diet Light Formula and a squirt of Foster and Smith's Vita Coat. She also put the dog on a pill program for fleas. Now the dog's hair is beautiful with no itchy problem.

Fran Westfall of New Oxford suggests Lillian contact Replacements, LTD. in Greensboro, N.C.. Phone 1-800-REPLACE.

ANSWER — Bonnie Blain, Halifax, wanted a pattern for an upright vaccuum cover that looks like a doll with a dress or apron that goes to the floor. Beth Ballinger writes that she has a Millie the Maid pattern that she purchased new and never used. She is willing to give it away in exchange for one made for her vacuum cleaner. Write to Beth at P.O. Box 373, Martindale, PA 17549.

ANSWER — Four-year-old Victoria Gaffney wanted information on raising and caring for a miniature donkey. Thanks to Beth who writes that miniature donkeys are an excellent pet choice. Beth has two with 11-inch ears. No toy in any store can give the hours of entertainment that they give. Donkeys have a gentle nature, easily bond, and are not stubborn.

Beth suggests getting a baby donkey; however, donkeys of any age will lap up affection and want to please. At age 2, donkey bones are strong enough to start riding them for short periods. They are able to pull a cart at an earlier age.

Donkeys are less maintenance than a pony. Donkeys require shelter, fresh water, hay, a yearly teeth check, and occasional hoof trimming.

Beth recommends subscribing to Miniatrue Donkey Talk, Inc., 1338 Hughes Shop Rd., Westminster, MD 21158-2911 or phone (410) 875-0118.

The worker ants carry the grits to the queen, who eats them. When she drinks water, the grits ecpand in her stomach and kill her. The remainder of the hill dies within a day.

MILK AMERICA'S HEALTH KICK

Abundant Spring Rains Increase Face Fly Populations

SHAWNEE MISSION, Kan. — "It's face fly season and cattle producers are bracing for more severe infestations because of abundant spring rains and good weather for fly reproduction," said Dr. Larry Moore, Bayer Veterinary Services. Flies are usually present from April to October, but peak fly season is between July and September.

These pests do more than irritate cattle — they create economic losses by spreading pinkeye through a herd.

"Face flies mainly attack livestock around the face and feed on the mucous secretions from the eyes," Moore said. Heavy face fly infestations usually are followed by an increased incidence of pinkeye disease (infectious bovine keratoconjunctivitis). Pinkeye is an inflammation of the cornea and the conjunctiva caused by several organisms, primarily the Moraxella bovis bacterium, that is spread by the face fly.

"If face flies get on an animal with the pinkeye bacteria and feed on their eyes, the flies can spread the disease throughout the herd," Moore said.

In infected cattle, the eyes weep heavily, the cornea becomes clouded and the eyelids eventually close. If left untreated, affected animals can injure themselves and will not perform well because of poor vision.

"Economically, the face fly's role in spreading pinkeye is what is most significant," said Moore.

According to the "CRC Handbook of Pest Management in Livestock," face fly infestations translate to economic losses of up to $21 per head for stockers and $27 per head for calves. In severe cases of pinkeye, blindness occurs, and cattle must be handled and fed separately or destroyed because of their inability to see how to get to feed and water.

Face fly control can be difficult becasue the flies congregate on the hard-to-treat area of the face. However, some products offer effective control, including ear tags, sprays, back-rubbers and some pour-ons.

Even with these controls, Moore recommends producers check their calves often and check with their local veterinarians if problems develop. Face flies are very difficult to control because they do not linger on the animal for longer than a few minutes, needing only a few minutes to feed before returning to the grass and bushes, Moore said.

Recently, Bayer introduced its fully Integrated Pest Management (IPM) system for the cattle industry. The program assists producers in identifying pest problems, such as face flies, and determining the best management strategies to control them through a variety of chemical, biological and cultural practices.

Hayes Visits Kunzler To Highlight Compensation Reform

TYRONE (Blair Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. visited the Juniata/Kunzler plant here to celebrate the first anniversary of Gov. Tom Ridge's comprehensive workers' compensation reform.

Hayes said, "Pennsylvania's 2,300 food processing plants make a significant contribution to the economy. The Ridge Administration's efforts to promote a job-friendly environment in the commonwealth has been particularly helpful to our agribusinesses."

Hayes joined Gov. Tom Ridge, Lt. Gov. Mark Schweiker, and three other cabinet members in highlighting the benefits of workers' compensation reform.

"Workers' compensation reform is one of the most important jobs initiatives every to become law in Pennsylvania. Workers' compensation reform, along with historically reduced taxes, electric competition, and new common sense environmental policies have contributed to a new Pennsylvania that is a great place to do business and a great place to creat jobs," Ridge said. "World class employers are expanding and location here thanks to the reform."

Kunzler is a self-insured employer that has seen significant savings in workers' compensation expenditures due to new workplace safety awareness.

Hayes recognized an anniversary of another kind for the Kunzler Company — one year without a lost time injury. "This is a significant event for the Juniata/Kunzler plant," Hayes said. "Their attention to safety is an important component of the effectiveness of workers' compensation."

Juniata/Kunzler is part of Kunzler and Company, Inc., headquartered in Lancaster County.

Workers' compensation premium rates have been reduced this year on average by 25 percent, with many employers realizing far higher savings. And, based on early trends, these savings could go much higher, even close to double the nearly $500 million savings originally projected.

Ring-Drive Silo Unloader Introduced

POUND, Wis. — The Patz Model RD-2100 ring drive silo unloader with the new Polar Claw™ chain fits 3-cable tripod or 3-cable hexapod suspension.

The features requested by most farmers are standard equipment:

•The Polar Claw chain is ideal for frozen and hard-packed silage. The cutters-and-claws chain aggressively tears silage loose and quickly moves it to the blower.

•Blower with replaceable blower band and impeller with four swinging, adjustable, cupped paddles for easy startup and more capacity.

•Roller-chain ring drive allows one motor to power the RD-2100.

•The ring-drive torque limiter features a proven radial-pin design for machine protection.

•Drive ring flanges to inside for extra strength and reversible for doubled ring life.

•Spring tension keeps high-speed, self-sharpening power cutter blades tight to the silo wall to shave it clean.

•Proven-reliable electrical joint with fiber-disc bearings.

New Utility Backhoes For Compact Tractors

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The new Models 757C ad 759C New Holland backhoes are designed for Class II and Class III compact diesel tractors. Both provide tight-quarters digging with minimum soil compaction to expand tractor utility for plumbers, builders, nurserymen and landscapers. On farms they simplify repair of field tile drainage systems.

Both units feature a 2-piece [illegible] swing, dipper stick, and bucket. Controls are mounted on a low-profile console to provide unobstructed operator view of the trench.

Rigid, full length sub-frames are used for backhoe mounting on New Holland compact tractors to protect the tractor chassis. The sub-frame design allows quick mounting and removal to free the tractor for other work. The Model 759C also mounts on larger three- and four-cylinder tractor 3-point hitches.

Digging depth is 7½ feet for the Model 757C. The Model 759C digs 9½ feet. A wide range of bucket widths lets operators choose combinations for individual needs.

The new Model 757C backhoe is powered by tractor hydraulics. The model 759C is also available with a self-contained PTO hydraulic pump and reservoir for use on large farm tractors. Reinforced boom, dipper, swing frame, subframe and stabilizers on the new units improve digging force up to 20 percent over previous designs.

Combined Livestock, Milk Auction Commands High Prices

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TROY (Bradford County) — Forty-seven buyers joined together to support the youth of Bradford County in a combined livestock and milk auction at the 1997 Troy Fair.

Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes joined in the event as he recalled his own experience in 4-H and FFA and called for support for the youth programs.

"We need a strong agriculture in Pennsylvania and in America and to do that we need young men and women to have experience at events like the Troy Fair," Hayes said.

As the auction began, Hayes held Mark Zuber's grand champion lamb while the bidding commenced.

Seventeen market lambs were sold with the grand champion commanding a price of $3.75 per pound. First National Bank of Canton purchased the 108-pound animal.

The reserve grand champion market lamb, raised by Eileen Elliott, brought the next highest price. Wyalusing Livestock Sales purchased this animal for $2.70 per pound.

During the course of the lamb sale, which averaged $1.53, four were donated back to the youth program with the proceeds going to fund the scholarship program.

Mark Zuber's grand champion lamb was donated back by First National Bank of Canton and repurchased for 1.15 per pound by Roy Watson. Also donated back was a 130-pound lamb sold by Justin Goodwin and purchased by County Recovery Service for $1.80. That lamb brought $1 on its second trip and was purchased by the Rome Vet Center. The Troy Fair Association and Columbia Cross Roads Equipment each purchased Julie Gore's 120-pound lamb for $1 per pound and resold it. The final bid came from Wyalusing Sales for $.80.

Only five steers crossed the auction block with prices ranging from $1.15 to .625 per pound and an average of .825.

The 1,156-pound grand champion raised by Jade Wood commanded the high price and was purchased by Cross Roads Equipment.

In turn, the reserve grand champion brought the second highest price at $.925 per pound. The steer was raised by Jason Laudermilch and purchased by Deer Park Lumber.

The reserve grand champion was donated back to the scholarship program where it brought .65 per pound and was purchased by Glen Shores.

Market hogs proved to be one of the most popular animals as 32 head were raised and sold bringing an average price of $1.85. Six of those, including the grand champion, were resold to benefit the scholarship program.

The grand champion outpaced all others as the 228-pound hog, raised by Melanie King, showed a final bid of $4 per pound. Williams Oil purchased the animal. Prices were a little lower as the grand champion crossed the auction block the second time. Northern Tier Real Estate gave $1.60 per pound for the donated animal.

The second highest seller was the 222-pound reserve grand champion hog raised by Eric Kenyon. The hog, which was purchased by County Recovery Service for $2.75, was also donated back to the scholarship program where it brought $1.50 per pound and was purchased by Judson's Incorporated.

Also resold were hogs raised by Jill Chrzan, Kristy Howland, Annie O'Connor, and Bobby Tuttle.

Chrzan's 246-pound hog was purchased by CoreStates Bank for $1.90 and resold to Rockwell's Feeds for $1.30. Howland's 252-pound hog was first purchased for $1.90 by CoreStates Bank and resold for $1.50 to Cathy Ramtire. P&C Foods purchased O'Connor's 210-pound hog for $1.90 and resold it to Agway Ag Products for $1.60. The final resale was Tuttle's 244-pound hog which was purchased by Purina Feeds for $1.90 and resold to Bryan's meats for 1.50 per pound.

Buyers also turned out for the 1997 Milk auction where bottles of milk are auctioned off from the champions of the Youth Dairy Show. The proceeds of the sale are divided between the owner of the animal, the member's 4-H or FFA program, and the county 4-H or FFA program.

Brian Sharer's supreme champion turned heads as a gallon of milk from the animal sold to Double Aught Lumber for a record-setting $1,000. Sharer is a member of the Udder Bunch 4-H Club.

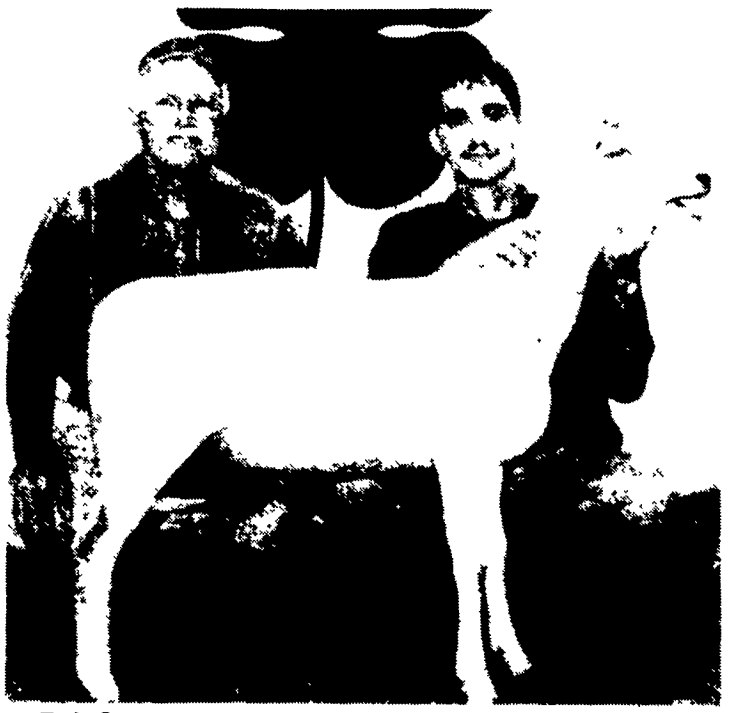
A quart of milk from the Holstein grand champion commanded the second highest price at $725. Richard Mellinger purchased the milk in support of Aaron Sheeley, the owner of the animal.

In all, milk from nine animals was auctioned off averaging $490 per animal.

Three baskets of dairy products were also donated to raise money for the youth programs. Bradford County Dairy Promotion and Nancy Hetrick donated the baskets which each brought more than $200.

To entice even more buyers, a local dairy farmer donated a pair of tickets to the sold-out Leann Rimes show. Simply Terry purchased the tickets for $160 each with the proceeds going to benefit the Rainbow Riders, a group that uses horses to help children with disabilities.

As the gavel on Bob Shaylor's auction block drew silent, Wyalusing Sales singled itself out as the high volume buyer, purchasing five animals. Donald White Accounting Service, Judson's Incorporated, and Columbia Cross Roads Equipment were caught in a three-way tie for the second high volume buyer with three purchases each.



Bob Storch of the First National Bank of Canton poses with Mark Zuber's grand champion lamb which sold for $3.75 per pound.

Eileen Elliott sold her reserve grand champion market lamb for $2.70 per pound.

The reserve grand champion market hog was raised by Eric Kenyon. County Recovery Service purchased his hog for $2.75 per pound. Representing the business are John Palmer, Jared Palmer and Jordan Palmer.

Jason Laudermilch exhibited the reserve grand champion steer which sold for $.925 per pound.

Two Pennsylvania Ag Students Win CAEP Grants

FERGUS FALLS, Minn. — Two Pennsylvania agriculture students were among 17 young rural Americans from 10 states who have been awarded scholarship grants from the Communicating for Agriculture Exchange Program (CAEP) to take part in a special agricultural exchange to Europe.

This is the fifth year that Communicating for Agriculture (CA) has raised funds through its foundation to help send young rural Americans on practical ag training exchanges to farms and agribusinesses in European countries. The scholarships, ranging from $500 up to $2,000 for year-long exchanges, were awarded to winners who are training on farms, horticulture operations, and ag research institutions in England, Denmark, Germany, Hungary, Ireland, The Netherlands, Northern Ireland, and Sweden.

Both of the CA exchange scholarship winners from Pennsylvania are Pennsylvania State University dairy management students. They are also the first two CAEP trainees to go to Northern Ireland. They are on training placements at the Agricultural Research Institution of Northern Ireland in Hillsborough, near Belfast. They include:

* Mark Mosemann of Warfordsburg. Mosemann is a dairy and animal science major at Penn State. He will work in the dairy department studying intensive grazing techniques and assist in research at the Hillsborough research center. Mosemann has worked with dairy cattle for 10 years, and currently owns 10 Holstein cows that he as used for an independent study of grazing behavior.

* Amy Packard of Troy. Packard, like Mosemann, is on a three-month training placement at the Hillsborough institute focusing on grazing management. A senior at Penn State, she is pursuing a bachelor's degree in diary and animal science, with a dairy production-management option. Her goal is to become a grazing systems consultant in the dairy industry, building on her dairy farm background.

The other CA European exchange grant winners and host countries include Ginger Airheart of Rapid City, S.D. - England; Kimberly Badtke of Amery, Wis. - The Netherlands; Kimberly Bridgham of New Gloucester, Maine - Denmark; Ryan Iest of Madera, California - The Netherlands; Courtney Johnson of New Richmond, Wis., - The Netherlands; Paul Mahoney of Kensington, Minn. - Germany; Susan Mandelin of Wisconsin Rapids, Wis. - Sweden; Susan Owen, Rochester, Minn. - Hungary; Rebekah Palmer of Monmouth, Oregon - Germany; Eric Smoczyk of Stanley, Wis. - The Netherlands; Bethany Stebbins of Wheaton, Ill. - Germany; Matthew Thome of Adams, Minn. - Denmark; Rebecca Wallace of Champaign, Ill. - Ireland; Jennifer Warr of Eufaula, Alabama - The Netherlands; and Kent Whittig of Caldwell, Idaho - Germany.

"We started this scholarship program to encourage more young Americans entering agricultural production and agribusiness careers to gain international experience. We're pleased with the enthusiasm and talent of this year's winners, and it's good to see increased overall interest in our overseas exchange program," said Beverly Gilmartin, who manages the CAEP outbound program.

This year the Communicating for Agriculture Scholarship and Education Foundation raised a total of $22,500 for the grant program, including contributions from private individuals and other organizations. During the first five years of the European grant program, the CA Foundation has raised more than $72,000 in contributions for the scholarships.

Contributors this year include Aegon USA of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; the Illinois Farm Development Authority of Springfield, Ill.; Core Marketing, Irvine, Tex., Smedsrud Farms, Ashby, Minn.; Jerald Wilwerding, a CAEP alumni, and other individuals.

In addition to the scholarship program, CAEP continues to offer its regular, low-cost exchange placements for trainees in agriculture, agribusiness, horticulture, and agri-home management to more than 15 countries, including Australia, Brazil, Canada, New Zealand, Costa Rica and most European countries.

Bill Leib Captures National Sheep Show Victory

BETH MILLER
Cumberland Co.
Correspondent

MECHANICSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Bill Leib certainly has the right outlook when he goes to compete in a sheep show.

"I go to each show with the same attitude. I try to do my best," the 16-year-old Mechanicsburg boy explained.

Leib certainly demonstrated just how good his best can be when he took home the grand champion ram and the reserve champion ewe titles for Rambouillets during the fourth annual All American Junior Show held at the Johnson County Fairgrounds in Indiana.

The show, which is geared toward young sheep breeders, drew competitors nationwide from Maine to the state of Washington, Leib said.

This was the first time the Cumberland Valley High School 11th grader competed in the top caliber competition.

The young people from across the United States who flocked to the show brought a wide variety of sheep breeds. In addition to the Rambouillets, there were Cheviots, Corriedales, Oxfords, Columbias, Dorsets, Hampshires, Montadales, and Southdowns.

Leib, who is active in FFA and 4-H, won his two top titles after placing second in the showmanship event in his class of 19 competitors.

He said his aim now is to go back to the 1998 show and win that contest, which was one of 10 showmanship events at the national competition.

Leib also took second place in the best four head of ewes category and for the pair of lambs contest. In addition, he captured first in the category for breeders young flock.

Leib said he is especially proud of taking the reserve champion ewe title because the winning animal is a ewe that he raised himself.

The showmanship contests weren't the only events of interest at the Indiana competition, he said.

For example, he said, there was a fleece show, promotion of species events and video, poster, essay, logo, and advertising layout contests.

Leib said he can't wait to go to next year's show and that he is looking forward to entering some of the non-showing competitions during his second time around.

Leib, who is the son of Bob and Suzie Leib, Mechanicsburg, already is a pretty busy showman since he enters his animals in an average of 12 or more shows each year.

Sheep aren'ts his only interests, either. Leib also is involved in goat and pig projects.

As if all those activities don't keep him busy enough, Leib also is working on a tree farm and as an assistant to a veterinarian this summer.

Bill Leib stands with his reserve champion ewe.

Tracy Participates In National Pork Leadership Institute

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Mark Tracy of Elizabethtown was one of 37 young adults to complete the Pork Leadership Institute conducted July 10-15 in Des Moines, Iowa, and Washington, D.C.

The event is designed to provide participants with a comprehensive overview of the pork industry and its related segments. It is sponsored by the National Pork Producers Council in association with the National Pork Board.

Tracy was selected as a state representative by the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council. The six-day event provided participants with information on pork production and research that can be publicized to producers and consumers in their states.

Mark Tracy of Elizabethtown and Missouri producer Sharon Oetting at the Pork Leadership Institute.

While at the institute, attendees discussed important industry issues, including the environment, foreign trade, legislative affairs and the pork industry's food safety and meat quality programs. During their visit in Iowa, attendess toured the meat science laboratory at Iowa State University and visited a nearby pork operation. The institute concluded with a trip to NPPC's Washington, D.C., office. Participants also visited members of their states' congressional delegations on Capitol Hill.

"The Pork Leadership Institute provides these outstanding youth with information on the ever-changing U.S. pork industry — information they can take home and share with others," said Sharon Oetting, a Missouri producer and chairperson of the Institute Advisory Committee. "It is essential, as the industry strives to make pork the Meat of Choice™, that we keep informed of the tremendous progress being made by our programs."

The second place winner receives a $1,000 cash award and the others receive $500.

Joshua Harvantin
(1st Place)

A realization that feed represents 50 percent of dairy production costs led Joshua Harvantine to choose a career in dairy nutrition consulting. Since graduating from Penn State, Harvantine is a Purina Mills representative, working with dairy producers in northeastern Pennsylvania and southern New York. This position allows him to maintain an active interest in the home dairy operation, which includes 20 of his own animals.

Harvantine's dairy management responsibilities began at age five when he fed calves after school and eventually grew to include sire selection and mating, feeding and managing replacements, calf registration, relief milking and field work.

Harvantine was a successful dairy judge as a 4-H member and Penn State student, and shared his skills as a teaching assistant for Penn State's dairy cattle evaluation class. Active in the Penn State Dairy Science Club, Harvantine chaired the Nittany Lion Fall Classic consignment sale.

Hydraulic Hammer
Provides high-impact forces for breaking concrete, rock, pavement and other demolition projects. Tools are available to cut, drive posts and sheetings.
Steel Tracks on display at Ag Progress Days

Snow Blower
For use with high-flow hydraulics, powerful snow blowers allow excellent visibility and have discharge chutes that can be adjusted from the operator's compartment.

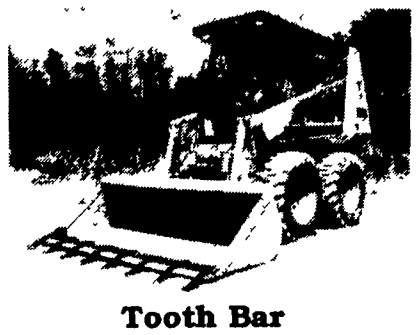
Backhoes
Transforms skid steer into a mini-excavator; several are available:
• D125 for the 1845C. This beefy Case backhoe has the capacity for heavy-duty digging.

Grapple Bucket
Picks up awkward, abrasive loads like scrap, salvage and recycled material

Preparator
Prepares soil for planting; rotating drum moves rocks and debris into attached bucket that has a perforated floor to allow dirt to sift through to ground. Debris is dumped by raising loader arms and reversing the drum.

Landscape Rakes
Multi-purpose tools break up and level lumpy soil, grades and distributes loose materials.

Auger
Dig vertical holes, even on slopes



Tooth Bar
Bar bolts to bucket mounting. Welded-on or replaceable pin-on steel teeth increase bucket digging capabilities and reduces wear on bucket cutting edges.

4-in-1 Bucket
Clam, scrape, doze or fill

Rotating Coupler
For hillside application.

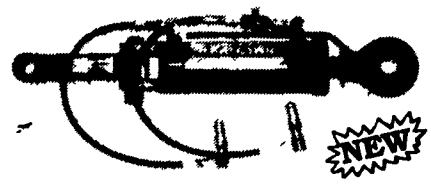
BEARLINK Replacement Top Link Improves The Performance Of Your Three Point Tractor!

The BEARLINK's seven inch adjustment stroke moves with hydraulic power, automatically locking in place wherever you want it...saving you trips back behind the tractor...making hooking implements or taking them off faster and safer...BEARLINK owners tell of shortening the hydraulic link while turning around at the ends of fields saving damage to equipment and making in-field angle adjustments without stopping...



It's Your Turn To Profit!
List $669.00

$620.19 Thru Aug. 31

Others report hookups and unhooks without the usual hassles of freeing up the threads and all the usual manual labor associated with their mechanical top link. Every dollar you save in labor costs, time, and damage to equipment or crops... goes directly to your bottom line.

THE NEW MX Series

CASE IH

MAXXUM

The new Case IH MAXXUM® tractors are built to provide superior performance on all farms. With remarkable power, maneuverability, visibility and comfort, the MX Series handles a wide variety of workloads with ease.

Tough enough for medium and heavy tillage, planting and high capacity loader work, the MX Series easily adapts to specialty, row crop, hay and forage, and utility applications.

The new MAXXUM tractors are equipped with powerful Case turbocharged engines that offer up to 44% torque rise, and rugged, power shuttle-shift transmissions to tackle even the most demanding applications. And the 47% hydraulic flow increase, redesigned PTO, and heavier hitch capacity mean even more power and control in the field and feedlot.

New styling improves visibility and appearance while the expanded space of the ultra quiet, 72 dBA cab, and improved ergonomics result in better productivity. With increased durability and reliability, MAXXUM tractors will enable you to work from sun up until late into the night without a drop in performance.

And because the MX Series comes from a long line of quality Case IH tractors built in North America, you can be assured of a solid return on your investment.

WANTED

for leading a tillage revolution

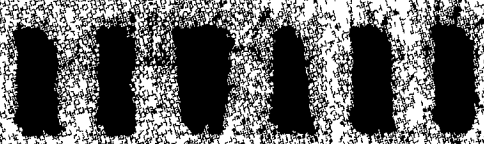
Krause's innovative new seedbed tillage lineup is leading a Profit-Till revolution! The dynamic Krause Profit-Till line will enable you to implement a mulch-tillage system that gets your in the field earlier, saves tillage trips, preserves residue and creates the optimum soil environment for vigorous crop emergence. It's a system that improves your bottom line! Call us at 1-800-KRAUSE to discuss your tillage needs.

Disk Ripper Landstar...the aggressive one! Offered in 16' to 41' sizes, the Landstar delivers one-pass performance that wasn't possible until now! Six rows of massive 270lb. point load spring steels pulling disc gangs rip through tough unworked soils. Then pairs of Krause's exclusive Landstar Incorporator panels shatter clods, level ridges, incorporate chemicals, mulching soil and residue...ahead of the rear tillage implements.

6150 Landshark XT...shows it's fit for any tillage system! Offered in 10' to 42' sizes, the Landshark XT features outstanding high residue performance. Choose from one rank of 22" x 270 shanks up front followed by 5 rows of [illegible] and 2-Piece K-Blade for knock unwanted soils. A single or dual roll field cultivator shapes High-Residue rear [illegible] provide a level finish.

4800 Series Field Cultivator...legendary Krause engineered! Five-bar frame has a residue tolerant 125° of lift and 24" clearance. Standard features include a self-leveling hitch and rugged 2-Piece K-Tine shanks. Positive Mechanical Depth Control eliminates slave cylinder problems. Available in 16' to 45' sizes or check out our Giant 5860 Series in 47' to 62' models.

3000 Series "Tick-free" Disc Harrows...perfect for seedbed preparation. A medium weight disc with conservation molded 17 degree gang angles, the 3000 leaves a level seedbed. Single location remote depth control lets you easily manage residue levels. 3950's are available in 16' to 27 1/2' sizes with 7 3/4" or 9 1/8" blade spacing. Check out the full line of Krause disc harrows from 12' to 45'.



The "capture" of any of the Krause "Profit-Till" line can provide you with:

1. Earlier spring soil warming for healthier plants.

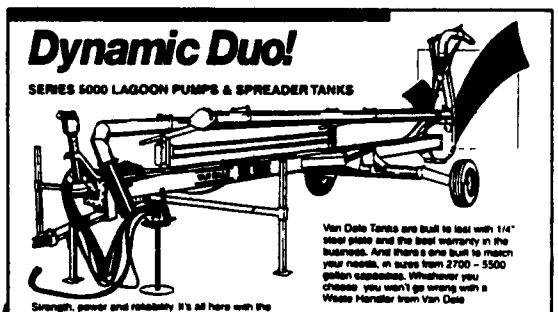
SERIES 5000 LAGOON PUMPS & SPREADER TANKS



Van Dale Tanks are built to last with 1/4" steel plate and the best warranty in the business. And there's one built to match your needs, in sizes from 2700 - 5500 gallon capacities. Whatever you choose you won't go wrong with a Waste Handler from Van Dale Strength, power and reliability. It's all here with the new Series 5000 Lagoon Pumps. These pumps have the perfect combination of agitation volume and pressure needed to break up hard surface crust or bottom manure solids with speed and power. And with up to 5000 G.P.M. agitation capacity, it can blast a stream of manure 100' or more in any direction to create an easy pumping and spreading slurry. The new Series 5000 trailer mounted or 3-point hitch, by far the fastest and easiest to operate pumps on the market.

MEASURING PASTURE PRODUCTION/ CONSUMPTION SHOULD BE PART OF GRAZING MANAGEMENT

Clyde Myers
Berks County Extension Agent

In the early '90s, when today's intensive grazing became accepted as a method of harvesting forage, I was as skepticval as most people. As a little boy, I remember that the spring forage growth was still standing in the middle summer. Our 20 dairy cows on 25 acres of pasture did their own selection, leaving much forage wasted.

In 1992, when a few dairymen in Berks County became interested in grazing, I tried to keep an open mind. Recalling my childhood, my concern was total forage production under intensive grazing compared to cultivated forages. Of course, my knowledge and experience was in machine harvesting and silo storage with total confinement systems.

Forage production information under intensive grazing management systems is scarce. Research measurements from Penn State research a few years ago report 4- to 5-ton of dry matter production from grass pastures.

In order to determine forage dry matter production in intensive grazing systems, field studies started in Berks County in 1993. With the advice of Dr. Marvin Hall, PSU extension agronomist, my former co-worker, retired Berks County extension agent in agronomy, Herbert Wetzel, and I began measuring paddock forage growth on farms. Since 1995, Berks County extension agent in agronomy, Mena Hautau, has helped with the project.

Using a pasture plate measurer, forage dry matter growth and consumption was measured. Available pasture yield was determined, before animals entered a paddock and another from the paddock just grazed. The difference was the production and estimate consumption. Please understand these measurements were of different paddocks on the same day, so the pasture growth and production could vary somewhat because of species and field differences. But most of the paddocks were next to each other with same species and field characteristics. Results of pasture growth and production and estimates of consumption are found on Table 1.

Dry Matter Production/Consumption

The results show that intensive grazing can match the dry matter production/consumption of cultivated forages. Remember these were estimated consumption figures. I wonder what is the actual animal consumption from a field with a yield of six tons of alfalfa hay?

Also, at 20 tons per acre of corn silage, dry matter production is around 6 tons per acre. After harvesting, storage and feeding losses, how many tons of total dry matter is actually consumed? Often the total losses are 20 to 25 percent. Though the measurements in Table 1 show pasture production, the most important management aspect is to estimate dry matter consumption.

Graziers, especially dairy farmers, need to know what animals are consuming from the pasture. Using these numbers with a nutrient analysis of the pasture sward will allow for better development of nutritionally balanced rations. With the high quality of legume-grass mixes, purchased protein can often be reduced dramatically.

Estimates Of Dry Matter Consumption

In order for grazing to take the next major step forward, dairy farmers who are graziers need to measure available pasture and paddocks to estimate dry matter consumption. Consider the following steps:

1. Determine the size of paddock(s). Without knowing the acres or land area in each paddock, it is impossible to estimate available dry matter and consumption per animal per day. There is a major difference in developing a feed program if pasture consumption is estimated at 20 pounds instead of 30 pounds of dry matter each day. Determining size will be more involved if paddock width is irregular. Many producers know field width then erect fence posts so that each paddock will enclose one acre. This will help greatly to determine the number of acres grazed.

2. Get a method to measure pasture. There are a number of methods one can use to get a reasonable estimation of available pasture, and they include:

- Yardstick, boot height, etc. This method uses forage height with the factor of about 300 pounds of dry matter per inch of pasture per acre.
- Pasture plate measurer. This method uses height and density of the pasture with the factor of about 430 pounds of dry matter per inch per acre.
- Electronic instruments. This method uses height and density with the specific instrument calibrator to estimate dry matter per acre.

3. Measure pasture paddock growth and available dry matter (pre and post grazing). At least once each week make pre and post measures of a paddock as part of your grazing management program. This will provide information to estimate pounds of pasture dry matter available and consumed.

4. Determine pounds of dry matter consumed per animal per day. With an estimate of total pounds of dry matter consumed, the number of animals that grazed the paddock, and the size of the paddock, one can now estimate the number of pounds of dry matter consumed by each animal per day.

5. Analyze nutrient content of pasture sward. It is important that each grazier know the nutrient content of grazed forages. Analysis of your pasture forages in spring, summer and fall will provide the essential information needed to develop good feeding programs. Do this for at least two consecutive years and every other year thereafter. You will find the animals are consuming very high quality forages with well managed pastures.

6. Work with your nutritionist. Work with your nutritionist in obtaining samples of pasture for analyses and in developing the most economical and balanced feeding programs to maximize intake of high quality pasture. In many cases, protein supplementation if rations can be reduced.

In closing, today's grazing is a "breath of fresh air" in what has been conventional machine harvested and stored forage industry. In recent years, I have become an activist for grazing, as I feel grazing has many positive aspects. They include:

- Low cost investment. An investment of under $10,000 can put 60 acres into intensive grazing. Compare that with investments a new tractor, silo, and other equipment.
- Labor, machine and storage costs. Forrest Stricker, one of our graziers, has mentioned many times that one of the best aspects of grazing is that he has more free time and things are less hectic, especially in the spring. Combining this with the decreased cost for machinery and storage, grazing can save money.
- Health of animals. If the feeding programs are balanced, animals are usually healthier. Exercise in conventional tie- and free-stall systems has always been a problem.
- Forage production and consumption can compare favorably to other systems. As our on-farm research shows, grazing can match other forage systems.
- Lower feed costs. Well-managed pasture produces a high quality which has shown on many grazing farms to dramatically lower feed costs.

OLEY (Berks Co.) — A meeting for those interested in joining the dairy cooperative of the National Farmers Organization (NFO) will be conducted at the Chris and Lavon Kratzer Farm here on Wednesday, Aug. 13 from 10 a.m.-2 p.m.

NFO representatives will be on hand to discuss joining the organization. Speaking at the meeting will be Jim Buelow, eastern regional coordinator for NFO, and Gary Ober, field representative.

Both will discuss opportunities with the organization from farmers in the Oley Valley, Kutztown, and Chester and Montgomery county regions, according to Chris Kratzer.

According to an NFO spokesperson, there are two other meetings scheduled the same week. One is in Mifflinburg at the Yoder's Restaurant at 1 p.m. on Aug. 12. Another is scheduled the same day at the Camelot Diner, Milroy, at 7:30 p.m.

Directions to the Kratzer Farm: from Rt. 222, take Rt. 73 east to Oley. After the red light in Oley, make a right on Rt. 662. The farm is about 2½ miles on Rt. 662 on the right-hand side, across from the Oley Mennonite Church.

Program Helps People Do Right Thing In Farm Emergencies

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — If you found a loved one pinned underneath a tractor or entangled in a piece of farm equipment, would you know what to do? Would you be able to react appropriately and quickly enough to save a life?

A new educational program, First-on-the-Scene for Farm Families, is designed to help farm workers and members of farm families know exactly what to do if they are the first person to discover a farm emergency.

The program was developed by Dennis Murphy, professor of agricultural engineering in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, and Davis Hill, executive director of the Farmedic National Training Center.

"Farm workers face many hazards, from tractor overturns to pesticide exposure," said Murphy. "Each year, many farmers and farm workers are involved in serious accidents on the farm. Their survival often depends on the individuals — usually coworkers or family members — who find them and must care for them until emergency personnel arrive.

"If you're the first person to find a victim, you need to make decisions and take actions in a logical order," Murphy said. "If you don't, you may cause further injury to the victim or you may risk injury or death yourself."

First-on-the-Scene for Farm Families teaches farm family members and farm employees how to make these important decision at the scene of a farm emergency. The program leads participants through various scenarios, forcing them to examine typical injury incidents and to make proper decisions and reactions to them.

The program takes an informal, discussion-style approach to safety training. "Instructors present a real-life accident scenario, then guide participants to reach the proper response on their own," Murphy said. "Using overhead transparencies to depict the accident scenarios, instructors ask a series of questions to help participants understand the important points that must be considered and decisions that need to be made in each situation."

The program is intended for all farm groups, including farm owners and managers, employees, spouses, 4-H and FFA groups, and others. "We encourage people to participate as a family or as a farm work group," noted Murphy.

First-on-the-Scene for Farm Families presentations typically run from 90 minutes to two hours. The program is divided into modules that cover common types of farm injury incidents, including tractor overturns, power take-off shaft (PTO) entanglements, and machinery entanglements.

"We suggest that groups start with these modules, because these are the most common types of accidents involving entrapment," Murphy said.

Other modules in the program cover grain bin, manure storage, and chemical and electrical emergencies. A final module helps participants learn the best ways to report a farm accident. Each module takes 15 to 45 minutes.

For more information about the program or about farm safety issues, contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office in your county or contact Penn State's Department of Agricultural and Biological Engineering Extension office at (814) 865-7685. Director Appointed To National Small Farms

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman announced that he appointed Pennsylvania Farm Link's Executive Director Marion L. Bowlan to the National Commission on Small Farms.

The national commission is being formed to study the problems of small and limited resource farmers and recommend ways to help them.

Glickman directed the commission to look at a wide range of programs and issues, including credit, risk management, education and outreach, and to recommend improvements to better serve small and beginning farmers. The commission will also look at ways in which USDA can ensure that small farms are treated fairly and have an equal opportunity to compete in vertically-integrated agricultural systems, and at ways to encourage small farms to adopt farm operations and production practices, such as value-added cooperative or direct marketing, to help improve their profitability.

With her husband and two children, Bowlan owns and operates a third generation family farm in Lancaster County. They raise beef on their intensively grazed farm and market their drug-free cattle directly to consumers. She also developed and implemented the Farm Link program in Pennsylvania.

The mission of the non-profit organization is to create more farming opportunities by linking beginning farmers with retiring farmers or other landholders. She said, "Almost ¼ of Pennsylvania's farms will change hands in the next 10 years. We must do more to encourage the next generation to enter farming and to find ways to help small farmers make a decent living from the land."

NOTHING WORKS LIKE A SILO

Sollenberger Silos Corp.

"HI-MOISTURE SHELLED CORN"

You know the advantages of hi-moisture shelled corn versus dry corn for animal feeding. So now consider the many advantages of POURED CONCRETE to store and protect your valuable grain.

"Our 6" thick concrete walls reflect 38% of light beams, resulting in 780 times more heat-resisting ability than steel, and 25 times more insulating power than steel."

"Our 6" thick walls have a very low leak potential compared to pre-fab silos of any kind, and a very low maintenance requirement."

"PROTECT YOUR CORN FROM THE HEAT."

These farmers from Virginia "switched" to our poured concrete silo to store their shelled corn and said: "Even during the hottest summer in our memory, the shelled corn from our poured concrete silo has kept its bright yellow color and has not heated. We have the best hi-moisture corn ever." (Cave View Farm, Inc., Weyers Cave, VA.)

MEMBER: International Silo Assn. - PA Forage & Grassland Council - American Soc. of Agric. Engrs. - Cro Storage Institute.

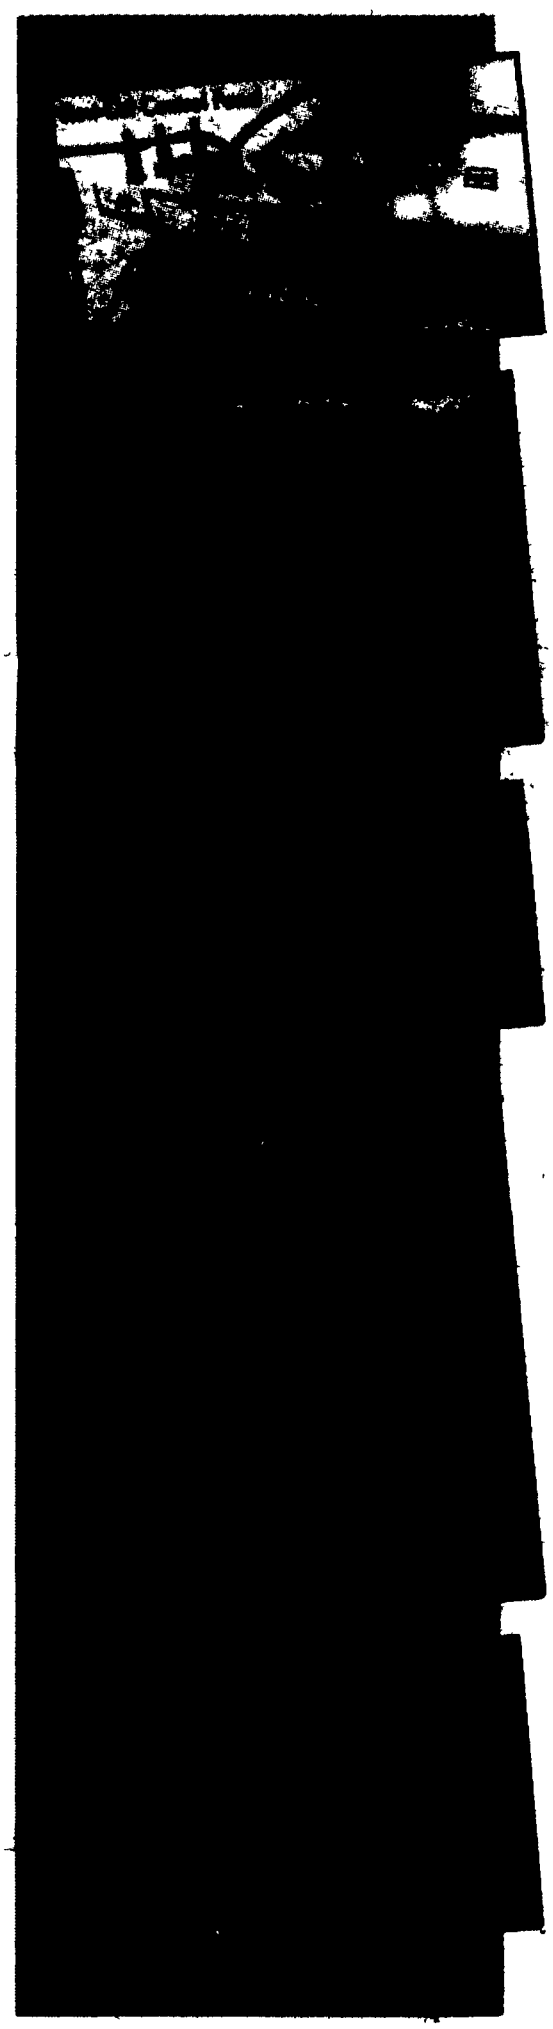
GVM

ROW CAT 800-G

At Ag Progress Days
Aug 12, 13, 14
East 1st Street



The Row Cat 800-G 4x4 is built tough to meet the challenges of Pre-Emergence and Post Emergence Markets. Today's customers are looking for a year round sprayer to decrease their capital investments. That is why GVM has developed the Row Cat.

The Heavy Duty drive train is all mechanical and will outperform any hydrastat machine built today. The Row Cat has very low ground compaction and equal weight distribution. Wit the standard 14.9Rx46 is less than 10 lbs. per square inch. The Row Cat is built with air ride suspension and oscillating axles for an excellent ride in the roughest field conditions. The unit is capable of reaching road speeds of up to 45 MPH plus it is capable of pulling a trailer; this eliminates a need for a nurse truck and trailer.

This makes the Row Cat a one man operation.

GVM paid special attention to the operator's comfort when designing the Row Cat's spacious pressurized cab forward design. We teamed up with New Holland's and Crenlo's Engineers and brought to life a cab with wrap around tinted windows and unmatched visibility. Air conditioning, high back adjustable seat, tilt and telescoping steering, AM/FM stereo cassette and hand and foot throttle controls - all of these features make a long day just a little shorter. GVM has also introduced a smart shifter to control the power shift transmission. This shifter has the ability to know when the air park brake is on and does not let you down shift at high RPM's. Also comes standard with Turn Signals and Horn.

CUTTING-EDGE RESEARCH FEATURED AT AG PROGRESS DAYS

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. – Hairy alfalfa, living mulch and zucchini "traps" are among the cutting-edge research projects that will be highlighted in guided tours of the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center during Penn State's Ag Progress Days, August 12-14.

The free 30-minute bus tours, which leave every 20 minutes throughout each day, will take visitors through Penn State's horticulture, plant pathology, agronomy and entomology research farms, as well as the USDA Pasture Research Laboratory.

On the horticulture farm, visitors will see an experiment in which zucchini squash plants are used as a "trap crop" in the production of cantaloupes. Because striped cucumber beetles prefer zucchini to cantaloupe, the pests are attracted to the squash. Researchers hope that control of the pest beetles can be achieved by applying insecticide only to the zucchini, resulting in cantaloupes with minimal chemical exposure and reducing the overall amount of insecticide needed for adequate control.

Other horticulture projects include a study comparing the effects of plastic and paper mulches on tomato, lettuce, broccoli, eggplant and okra production; research on production management and trellis systems for apples, pears and raspberries; and variety trials for sweet corn, pumpkins, broccoli, cabbage and cauliflower.

On the plant pathology farm, the tour will feature studies aimed at helping growers eliminate, manage or reduce crop damage from diseases. Several experiments are under way to combat the destructive late blight fungus. This disease, which attacks potatoes and tomatoes, has cost Pennsylvania growers millions of dollars in crop losses in recent years.

The agronomy farm portion of the tour will feature research on the use of crownvetch and other legumes as a "living mulch" in corn and soybeans. Scientists have found that legumes can provide ground cover and reduce soil erosion, as well as provide nitrogen to the main crop, potentially reducing the need to apply fertilizer.

Other agronomy research focuses on breeding and management trials for a variety of crops, including corn, soybeans, alfalfa, wheat, barley and forage grasses. Visitors also will see a study on how various tillage systems affect runoff and research on how various crop rotations influence corn yield.

At the USDA Pasture Lab, the tour will include research on clover varieties that are resistant to clover root curculio, an insect pest of clover and alfalfa; and studies to improve the establishment and management of switchgrass, a warm-season grass that can be used for livestock grazing and to provide habitat for game and song birds.

A project to evaluate alfalfa varieties for Colorado potato beetle resistance will highlight entomology research on the tour. Some of these new varieties have small glandular hairs that may prevent the insect from feeding or laying eggs on the plant.

Other entomology studies discussed on the tour will include research on the use of global positioning satellites and related technology to map pest and beneficial insect populations. By identifying insect "hot spots" and spraying only those areas of the field, scientists hope to reduce the amount of insecticides needed to control crop damage.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days features more than 500 acres of educational and commercial exhibits, tours and machinery demonstrations. It is held at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rock Springs, nine miles southwest of State College on Route 45. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, with extended hours of 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday. Admission and parking are free.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 toll-free through August 14 or visit the Ag Progress Days site on the World Wide Web at www.cas.psu.edu/docs/AGIS/APD/APD.HTML.

Royalty To Promote Dairy Products At Ag Progress

CLARION (Clarion Co.) — Check out the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotional Services, Inc. booth at the dairy and livestock tent where dairy princesses and alternates will be serving milk during Ag Progress Days.

The dairy princesses and alternates will put to use the promotional tips they received at the Dairy Princess Training Seminar held recently.

At the seminar, five "KEYS" to promoting now and in the next century were introduced by former Pennsylvania Dairy Princess, Robin Wilbur in her keynote address. Thirty six county princesses including six from Maryland, 20 alternates, and 25 adult promoters assembled at Lycoming College, Williamsport, for three and a half days of intensive training in dairy promotion.

Robin's five keys: change, continuous education, creativity, networking, and time management were echoed repeatedly throughout the sessions by speakers and workshop leaders and became the theme for Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services chairperson, Charlene Ranck, in her concluding address.

Twenty-two dairy industry leaders and professionals and dairy princess coordinators were aided by reigning Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Angela Werley and Alternates Merideth Weiderspahn and Lisa Fitch and Maryland State Princess Sara Bedgar. All aspects of the dairy industry and nutrition were addressed along with the "how to's" of public speaking, media relations, promotion, personal appearance, and social conduct. In addition, a special session on promotion was offered for adult participants.

With more than 100 dairy maids, ambassadors, and countless committee people, dairy princesses and alternates represent the dairy industry and promoting its products in their respective counties. Dairy royaly will visit school classrooms, conduct demonstrations in grocery stores and malls, speak at meetings of farmers and non-farmers, write news articles and participate in radio and TV interviews. They will also occasionally be seen riding on parade floats and handing out awards at county fairs. It will be a busy but rewarding year as they do their part to contribute to the well being of the dairy industry and the health of the consuming public.

Free Attraction
An 'Ag-Venture'

Why does an airplane need farm animals? When does a hen wear yellow eyeliner? Is is possible to "sweat like a pig?"

Certainly not run-of-the-mill questions your average person ponders daily, but the answers may surprise even life-long farm folk. And that's what Barn Tours, The Great Allentown Fair's brand new free attraction sponsored by the Fairgrounds Farmers Market and The Morning Call, are designed to do — surprise city and farm folk alike with fascinating tidbits that will enrich their "fair experience."

What exactly is a Barn Tour? Perhaps its definition calls for the invention of a new word — "agritainment."

Every year, thousands of fairgoers walk through the fair's livestock shelters looking at hundreds of barnyard critters. By embarking on a 45-minute Barn Tour, fairgoers will have the opportunity to learn about the animals they are seeing, what it takes to raise them and the impact they have on American lives.

Barn Tour guides are expert in their knowledge of farm animals and in keeping the tours fun and entertaining. They are equipped with portable microphones so each audience of up to 50 "tourists" can appreciate the informative and amusing stories being told. The Barn Tours company conducts these excursions at dozens of state fairs throughout the country.

Allentown Fair Ag-Education Superintendent Ruth Grim said that bringing Barn Tours to the Fair progresses the aggressive approach the Fair progresses the aggressive approach the Fair started in 1995 to make exhibits more interactive with the public.

Breed explanation signs in the shelters, "Ask Me" buttons worn by the exhibitors, and "You Be the Judge" sheets handed out at the judging tent have all helped to better communicate the "agricultural story" to the urban audience the fair attracts.

Barn Tours, Ruth projects, will take the fair's educational role a step further. To do so, the Barn Tour professionals will involve the fair's exhibitors in the process.

The exhibitors will have the chance to chime in along the tour's path. This will promote the fair's farm families from simply showing their animals, to taking center stage in demonstrating the vital important of their profession.

The origination site for the tours will be set up right next to the Fair's Farmerama Theater just inside Gate 6. The tours will depart every 20 minutes from about the time the fair opens each day till dusk. There will be a congregating area for the tour groups to assemble.

So what are the answers to all those barnyard trivia questions opening this story? Just tag along on a free Barn Tour and find out!

Getting rid of those annoying hang-ups in your operation is easier than ever.

The new SURGE® One Touch™ makes stanchion milking as easy as this. A lightweight, gun-grip design integrates the milk line and pulsation connections into one simple process. Yet it's built incredibly tough to handle the real world demands of the dairy barn.

Most importantly, One Touch brings high-tech automation to stanchion operators with two optional management modules.

The TIMEKEEPER™ II module signals you when the cow finishes milking and displays how long she took to milk...promoting fast, consistent milking that leads to better udder health.

The Milk Yield Module measures individual cow production and milking time, allowing instant analysis of each cow's performance.

By putting today's production information at your fingertips, the SURGE One Touch lets you capture your cow's performance in the palm of your hand.

CROPS AND FORAGE INFORMATION FEATURED AT AG PROGRESS DAYS

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. – Visitors to Penn State's Ag Progress Days, August 12-14, can learn about new developments in forage and crop production in the Crop and Soil Science Tent.

"We're featuring plots showing different hay and forage growth, as well as new forage grasses for grazing," says Marvin Hall, associate professor of forage management and coordinator for the tent. Corn, soybean and weed control demonstration plots also are located near the Crop and Soil Science Tent.

The tent features educational exhibits and demonstrations. Exhibits explore soil fertility and testing, nutrient management, pest control, forage quality testing, weed identification and other topics.

Farmers can visit the "Ask the Experts" booth to find solutions to problems with soil fertility, diseases, insects, corn, forages, small grains and tillage practices. Specialists from the Pennsylvania Crop Management Association and Penn State's agronomy, entomology and plant pathology departments will be on hand to share research results and answer questions.

Visitors to the Crop and Soil Science Tent also can test their knowledge using an agronomy quiz board, with questions about small grains, soybeans, corn, forage and soil fertility.

Also at this site will be the Hay Show, with displays of the state's best hay samples. Growers who would like to enter the show are invited to bring samples to the Hay Show drop-off point near the Ag Progress Days east entrance on the morning of August 12. All growers will receive the results of their hay's evaluation.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days features more than 500 acres of educational and commercial exhibits. The Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center is located nine miles southwest of State College on Route 45. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, with extended hours on Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Admission and parking are free.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 through August 14. Or, if you have access to the Internet, visit Ag Progress Days on the World Wide Web: http://www.cas.psu.edu/docs/AGIS/APD/APD.HTML.

NEW RINGGOLD

This year, the Eckroth family celebrates 50 years in the farm equipment business. Eugene and Dan Eckroth continue the history of serving Case IH customers started by their grandfather back in 1947. Today the family has three locations: Eckroth Bros. Farm Equipment in New Ringgold, the original shop and store; D&E Equipment in Bloomsburg; and Eckroth Equipment Company in Orefield.

"We feel strongly that we want to treat people like we want to be treated," Dan said. "We take time to listen to their needs and help them where we can. No high pressure. Just the help they want."

The dealerships send parts nationwide and do on-farm service work where needed in their respective areas. They are a full-line dealership that includes combines, tractors, skid loaders, and tillage and planting equipment. Past customers are appreciated and the Eckroth brothers look forward to serving many old and new customers in the future.

4-H Fair Aug. 14-16

Are you looking for some great family fun at a low price? Come to the Montgomery County 4-H Fair at the 4-H Center near Skippack.

The fair will be held Thursday, Aug. 14 through Saturday, Aug. 16. The fair is open to the public on Thursday from 5 - 9:30 p.m., Friday from 9 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. A parking donation of $3 is requested to help defray costs. There are no other admission fees. You won't find commercial rides here, but good, old wholesome fun — animal shows, exhibits of completed 4-H projects, bands, game booths run by the 4-H'ers themselves and hands-on, get-involved fun.

On Thursday evening, opening ceremonies and the banner parade begin at 6 p.m. followed by the sheep show at 6:30 p.m. Deanna Alkalouti, a young rising country western star from the North Perin area, is featured from 6:30 p.m. - 9:30 p.m. This will be her second appearance at the 4-H fair, this time accompanied by her band.

There are pony rides for the kids and a horse-drawn hay ride for everyone, weather permitting, beginning at 7 p.m. as well as a horseless horse show. In this event in which the public is invited to take part, the participant is a "rider" from the waist up and a "horse" from the waist down while they participate in real horse show type classes. Demonstrations will be presented before the start of the activity.

Other highlights of opening night include 4-H member recognition as well as the introduction of the outstanding 4-H members and scholarship presentations. The popular giant Fabric Sale returns for extended hours, beginning from 6 p.m. - 8 p.m. on Thursday. Indoor exhibits include crafts, foods, vegetables, flowers, woodworking, clothing and a wide variety of 4-H and open class entries. The indoor exhibits are open until 9:30 p.m.

On Friday, rabbits, dairy cows, steers, Seeing-Eye puppies, pigs and cats will be judged. The ever popular Daisy Jug Band returns to perform from 6:30 p.m. - 9:30 p.m., with their great brand of foot-stomping music. In between all the animal shows and indoor exhibits, "Make It and Take It" Project Sessions will be held as well as a Fun Olympics for the children. At 10 a.m. the Norristown Zoo presents a special show for everyone. At noon, the Homemaker's Country Quilt Club will present a demonstration, "Setting a Quilt in its Frame," inside the building. From 2 p.m. - 8 p.m. Friday, as well as Saturday from 10 a.m. - 2 p.m., sewers can rummage through the Giant Fabric Sale, benefiting the 4-H Center.

On Saturday, the 4-H Goat Show and the 4-H horse demonstrations and drill teams will be featured. The Deep Creek Cloggers will perform at 12:30, followed by the Dog Obedience show. The Celebrity Goat Milking Contest at 12:15 p.m. will feature local celebrities vying for this year's championship title. To round out the day, a pet show consisting of domestic animals will be featured. All area youth are invited to bring their pets and participate in this event (no poultry or livestock allowed)

For more information and a more detailed schedule, call the 4-H Office at (610) 489-4315.

"It has been a wonderful experience to be the Maryland Farm Queen. It has enlightened me regarding what I want to do with the rest of my life and has opened a lot of doors," said Rende. "I think Maryland has benefitted as well from having a young woman with direct agricultural experience represent the state's largest industry. It is my hope that the 1997 Farm Queen will be just as enthusiastic in her role as Maryland's agricultural ambassador."

Young women between the ages of 16 and 19 who have earned their place in the 1997 Maryland Farm Queen Contest by winning county Farm Bureau-sponsored contest will compete for their renowned title, tiara, and scholarship and cash awards valued up to $4,000. Each must spontaneously respond to a "fish bowl" question either related to career opportunities, agricultural or environmental stewardship issues. Poise, appearance, personality, communication skills, and civic involvement are secondary requirements.

The 1997 Maryland Farm Queen will be present throughout the run of the State Fair to award prizes, and mingle with fairgoers, dignitaries, and media representatives. Her responibilities will continue throughout the year as she will participate in a number of activities representing Maryland agriculture. The runners-up will assist the Farm Queen with award presentations and serve as hostesses for dignitaries.

Woodland Owners Sought For Forestry/Wildlife Workshop

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — The Maryland Cooperative Extension Service and the Ruffed Grouse Society are looking for a few good men ... and women.

Specifically, the two organizations are looking for Maryland woodland owners interested in participating in their jointly sponsored "Coverts Project."

Named for thickets that provide habitat for wildlife, the Coverts Project features a peer-to-peer approach to forest wildlife education.

Each year 30 woodland owners receive free training in forestry and wildlife management principles. In return, they are asked to implement what they have learned on their own property and encouraged to share their new knowledge with neighbors and colleagues.

This year's training workshop is to be held Sept. 25-28 at Shepard Spring Retreat Center in Washington County.

Now offered in 11 states, the Coverts Project recently received national recognition when USDA's Cooperative State Research Education and Extension Service named the program a National NREM (Natural Resources and Environmental Management) Flagship Program for 1997.

If you would like to be one of the 30 Maryland landowners to join the ranks of Coverts Cooperators this year, contact Jonathan Kays, Western Maryland Research and Education Center, 18330 Keedysville Road, Keedysville, MD 21756 (phone: 301-432-2735).

DAIRYMEN SAY YES AS TESTING PERIOD NEARS END

As I am writing this, there are hundred and hundreds more Dairymen testing Formula M. The results are trickling in. By the time you read this, we may have the final results. I have been testing Formula M for years and all the results have exceeded my expectations in appetite improvement; higher energy level; giving more milk; cows (even the extremely difficult or next to impossible ones) getting pregnant on the first breeding.

AND NOW!!! Dairymen everywhere are telling me that the Somatic Cell Count goes down when they feed Formula M. Over and over, I am hearing that the Somatic Cell Count goes way down. Dairymen tell me that they have tried other products and that they thought they saw some benefits, but the same Dairymen tell me that they see very dramatic differences almost immediately when using Formula M. Dairymen say they see a vast improvement in energy level and appetite. They say that they can see a significant increase in milk in a week to ten days after starting on Formula M. Some Dairymen say their cows average 5 pounds more milk per cow, per day. The last reports I am waiting for are on Somatic Cell Count. They keep coming in and they keep verifying what we have been told many times before, that the Somatic Cell Count goes way down when feeding Formula M

If I had known all this before I set the price, (8¢ per cow, per day) I might have charged more. After all, it looks like most Dairymen will make an extra $1.00 per cow, per day.

Formula M is a powder and it comes in a 5 gallon plastic bucket. Feed Formula M according to the directions on the label, only ½ ounce per cow per day. (Formula M is very concentrated. ½ ounce per day is all they need). You can put Formula M in the TMR, you can put it in your grain mix or if you prefer, you can top dress Formula M All you need to do to get Formula M is call one of the numbers below. We ship the same day by UPS. Make the check payable to FRANK LAMPLEY and give it to the driver when he delivers.

A 5 gallon bucket is enough for about 40 cows for one month and costs only $92.00 (I pay freight). Formula M is completely free of drugs and made by the same people who make Vitamix.

There is one question that keeps coming up over and over, "How long do I have to keep feeding the Formula M?" "Forever?" The answer is, "Only as long as you want to keep making the extra dollar per day, per cow."

FORMULA M... IT'S WHAT CAUSES BABIES

Aerial Seeding Helps Conservation Projects

Editor's Note: The following article was submitted to support the demonstration of aerial cover crop seeding at Ag Showcase Day at Cecil County Fair last week. The Upper Eastern Shore Trib Team received an EPA research grant, along with the Farm Bureaus of Cecil, Kent, Queen Ann's, and Talbot counties to promote cover crops.

Brennan Starkley, Galena, Maryland is the author.

As a Peace Corps Volunteer in West Africa, I learned two things about environmental problems. First, if an environment deteriorates past a certain critical mass, it is very difficult and costly to repair the damage. Second, the people impacting and impacted by the situation must buy into and participate in the solution or it will only be superficial and temporary.

The desertification (conversion of an avid area to desert) of the Sahel (the arid area on the south flank of the Sahara desert) and the nutrient loading in the Chesapeake are very different problems. If we act now, we still have time to reverse trends in the Chesapeake before the critical mass is reached. Time is running out in the Sahel. We also have access to resources far beyond the scope of many African nations. Most importantly, Maryland's approach to nutrient reduction in the Chesapeake is based on participation and input from the people who are affected by the problem. It is essential for the Upper Eastern Shore Tributary Strategy Teams (one of ten volunteer teams appointed by Governor Glindening to recommend local strategies to reduce nutrient loading of the Bay) to maintain continued support and input from all the people who have a stake in the Bay cleanup process. This is essential because, if voluntary solutions are not adopted, regulatory command and control approaches to nutrient management may place undesirable burdens upon the agricultural community, and may preclude use of the most cost effective measures.

An airplane gives a rye seeding demonstration at the Ag Showcase Day last week at the Cecil County Fair. The program will help with cover crops as a conservation practice.

As a farmer, working with my father and brother to manage our family's farming operations in Kent County, I love spending time on the water, I love to fish, and I love to hunt. My participation in the Upper Shore Team quickly became focused on cover crops. We've been using a rye cover for many years on our farm to build up soil damaged by years of intensive vegetable production and have seen a dramatic difference in the soil's productivity. Cover crops are planted in the fall to reduce soil erosion, add organic matter, and to utilize residual nutrients remaining from the previous crop. In the spring they are plowed down or killed off, adding organic matter to the soil.

Planting cover crops is one of the most cost efficient options available for reducing excessive nutrient residue. Unfortunately there are significant barriers to greater adoption of a cover crop program. While most farmers acknowledge the beneficial aspects of cover crops, many do not plant them. Immediate cost and time constraints outweigh the perceived long term benefits. In this era of conservation and minimum tillage, many farmers feel they are maintaining enough residue and organic matter in their fields. The added benefit of cover crops just doesn't cover the costs. Furthermore, much closer management of fertilizer inputs has significantly reduced excess nutrients left in the field after harvest. Again, the costs of planting cover crops outweigh the savings in fertilizer. And finally, for most farmers, the planting dates required for cover crops to achieve maximum nutrient reduction conflict with corn harvest and wheat planting.

The goals of the Upper Eastern Shore Tributary Team regarding cover crops revolve around opening a dialogue on these issues. Last August, the Team helped initiate a workshop at the Wye Field day that brought farmers, MD. Dept. of Agriculture personnel, and members of the research community together to discuss the benefits and drawbacks of cover crops. Out of that workshop came a survey conducted by the Department of Agriculture to gauge farmers' attitudes towards cover crops. A cover crop task force was also formed to identify the critical issues regarding cover crops and to make policy recommendations on how to encourage greater cover crop use.

More recently, the Team, in conjunction with the Country Farm Bureaus of Cecil, Kent, Queen Anne, and Talbot Counties, was awarded a grant through the EPA to purchase seed and contract with aerial applicators to plant 1,000 acres of rye cover crop. By providing the seed and establishing the corp, both financial and time concerns of farmers are addressed in the fall. During the spring, the farmer will still bear the additional costs of plowing or otherwise killing the crop. Aerial seeding also allows the cover to be planted earlier by seeding into a standing crop rather than waiting for harvest. This will allow maximum nutrient uptake during the fall. From an administrative standpoint, the funding path is much simpler to monitor, saving time and money. The Team hopes this project will raise the visibility of cover crops and help to spark discussion in the farming community about the viability of cover crops in their crop rotations.

As in every aspect of the nutrient reduction process, the Teams need more participation and input from the general public on the issue of cover crops. On the one hand, cover crops have great potential to be a major contributor to nutrient reduction, but on the other, farmers can not justify their use in many situations based purely on short term agronomic benefits. From the initial response to the aerial seeding, there are many farmers willing to participate in a joint effort to increase cover crop acres. To achieve the acreage goals set for the Team, for the year 2000 and beyond, the farming community will need the support of the general public.

Agriculture has taken great strides in reducing its impact on the environment, particularly in Maryland. Farmers have alway been stewards of the land, providing habitat for wildlife, conserving forest tracts and wetlands, and maintaining the open spaces that so many people appreciate. To a farmer, nutrient loss is monetary loss. We have been consistently improving our fertilizer testing and application processes to reduce the amount of nutrients left after a crop is harvested, and are willing participants in the effort to continue reductions where feasible.

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TROY (Bradford County) — Kirklea Broker Ebony, owned by Matthew Pease of Susquehanna, was named supreme champion of the 1997 Northeast Region Pennsylvania FFA Dairy Show Monday, July 28 at Troy.

The senior 3-year-old champion Holstein captured the attention of judges Jerry Young and Ken Young of Gen Rich Farm, and stood out from among the nearly 300 animals representing six breeds that were shown.

Standing in the reserve champion Holstein position was Braund Valley Peanut, a senior 2-year-old owned by Craig Sheeley of Troy.

In the Ayrshire show, Amberleigh Yurkanin of Troy took top honors with Laneway Festivals November, a 4-year-old. Standing in the reserve grand champion position was Rose-Mor Annie, a senior 2-year-old owned by Raymond Adams of Montrose.

Kylie Lester of Montrose showed both the junior and the reserve junior champion of the Ayrshire show. The summer yearling, Melody-Lane Honey, was designated the junior champion. Her fall calf, Sunny Acres WVW Kineta, was named the reserve junior champion.

Heather Yurkanin of Columbia Cross Roads showed the grand champion Brown Swiss, 4-year-old Elm Brook Trouba Paisley. Joining the champion in the reserve position was Victory Acres Legacy Alisi, a junior 3-year-old owned by Michael Cole of Ulster.

Summer yearling Roseledge Lon Style, owned by Kylie Lester, was designated junior champion of the show. Elm Brook Sigma Jafine, a junior calf owned by Richard Spencer III of Troy, was named the reserve junior champion Brown Swiss.

In the Guernsey ring, David Shupp's dry cow, Shupps Dixie Jasper, took grand champion honors over David Kriner's dry cow, Castles King Flash Gloria. Among the junior animals, Lucas Trowbridge of Camptown exhibited both champions. Spring yearling Shale Hill Perfect Nola was named the junior champion and fall calf Mountain View Zero was named the reserve junior champion.

Named junior champion Jersey was Spruce Vine Juno's Patsy, a fall yearling owned by Heather Pease of Susquehanna. In the reserve junior champion spot was Frosty Valley Imperial Vanessa, a summer yearling owned by Daniel Harkness of Gillett.

Samuel Cole of Ulster had a championship day with his Milking Shorthorn. His junior 3-year-old Vista Cheri Dumplin was named the grand champion and his spring calf, Summit Vista Admiral Monica, was named the junior champion and the reserve grand champion.

MARVIN H. HALL
Associate Prof. of Agronomy and
VIRGINIA A. ISHLER
Ext. Asst.
Dairy & Animal Science
Penn State

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) —For nearly four decades scientists have been refining their ability to test forage quality. This has been done in an effort to improve animal nutrition and consequently animal production. Analytical procedures that previously required a week, or more, to complete can now be done in less than 10 minutes and with more accuracy than before.

As the ability to analyze forages has improved, the understanding of how to use the test results to improve animal efficiency and performance has also improved. Unfortunately, though, forage quality testing is a valuable management tool that many livestock producers still do not utilize.

Greater net profit is the bottom line for why livestock producers need to know the quality of the forages they are feeding. Not knowing the exact quality of the forage being fed is a two-edged sword that can cut into profits either way it swings. A dairy producer who guesses that the crude protein (CP) content of the haylage is 2 percent units lower and corn silage is 1 percent unit lower will be feeding more supplemental protein than is necessary. This extra CP to the ration will add $0.09/cow/day in feed costs. With a herd of 100 cows, this is equivalent to $9/day. It would take just a little over three days of not knowing the quality of the forages and feeding extra protein, as in this example, to pay for the cost of quality analyses (forage quality testing usually costs less than $15/sample.

The other edge of this two-edged sword of nor knowing forage quality is over estimating forage quality. Guessing that forage crude protein is greater than what it actually is results in adding insufficient supplemental protein to the ration and saving feed costs. Unfortunately, the cows are being "short changed" on CP, which could have a negative impact on milk production, especially in early lactation.

It is also important to note that guessing at fiber and mineral content will also have enormous economical impact. For example, the neutral detergent fiber (NDF) content of forages helps determine how much of the forage an animal will consume. Guessing too high or too low can have tremendous implication on intake, animal performance, and health. Knowing the quality of the forage being fed to animals not only saves or makes more money it also allows managers to provide better animal nutrition which will result in greater animal production and improved animal efficiency pound milk or weight gain per pound of feed consumed).

Knowing the quality of forages when selling or buying them has also proven to be economically smart. At Pennsylvania hay auctions, where the quality of the hay is analyzed, the results posted on each load prior to the auction confirms the economic value of knowing hay quality. At these auctions, each percentage unit increase in crude protein resulted in $8 more per ton. Selling 10 tons of 20 percent CP hay as 18 percent CP hay because the quality was not tested wil cost the seller about $160! On the other hand, buying 10 tons 18 percent CP hay as 20 percent CP hay cost the buyer $160.

A similar relationship between quality and price did not occur at hay auctions when the quality of the hay was unknown. Establishing a "fair" price for hay, if you are buying or selling, involves both parties knowing the quality of the hay.

How Should I Collect A Sample For Forage Quality Testing?

Collecting a sample to be submitted for quality analysis is the first step in obtaining accurate and useful results. Quality results will be useful only if the sample represents what the animals will eat.

Therefore, take a good random sample from each lot (forage taken from the same cutting at the same stage of maturity, the same forage species and variety, from the same field at the same time). Remember that the small sample collected may represent several tons of forage. Note the location of each lot in the barn or silo for easy reference when feeding.

Collecting Samples Of Baled Hay

1. Take a separate sample from each field and cutting.
2. Always sample with a bale cover such as a Penn State Forage Sampler. It is impossible to get a representative sample by using bale slices.
3. Insert the sampler to full depth into the end of each bale sampled. This will insure getting an accurate sample.
4. Take at least 20 widely separated sample cores from each lot.
5. Mix the 20 cores in a clean pail and place in a tight, clean, plastic bag.
6. Label each bag clearly with your name, address, the sample number, forage mixture, stage of maturity, and date harvested.

Collecting Samples Of Haylage And Silage At Harvest

1. Take sample as the silage is placed in the silo. Silos with excessive seepage should be resampled upon feeding.
2. Collect three to five handfuls of haylage or silage from the first load of the day in a plastic bag and place in refrigerator or freezer immediately.
3. Follow the same procedure for several loads of forage throughout the day. Combine samples and mix well to obtain a representative sample.
4. Repeat for each field if more than one field is harvested in any one day.
5. Throw different colored

Why Test

5. Does the laboratory do chemical analysis in addition styrofoam egg cartons into the blower at the end of each lot. This, will aid you in identifying the lots later as the feed is unloaded.

6. Label the bag clearly with your name, address, the sample number, forage mixture, stage of maturity, and date harvested.

Collecting Samples Of Haylage And Silage From Storage

1. Collect a one- to-two-pound sample from the silo as it is discharged from the unloader.

2. Do not collect the samples from the spoiled material on top of the silo. In upright silos, wait until two to three feet of silage has been removed.

3. Collect samples from the morning and evening feedings over a two-day period.

4. Mix the samples thoroughly, place in a clean plastic bag, and seal.

5. Store immediately in a cold place, preferably in a freezer, until analyzed.

6. Label the bag clearly with your name, address, the sample number, forage mixture, stage of maturity, and date harvested.

Preparing And Storing Collected Samples

Hay samples should be kept in a cool place, while haylage and silage samples should be kept frozen in an airtight container until sent and then should be mailed in insulated bags — preferably early in the week — to prevent bacterial decay which might change the results. Remember that the results will only be as good as the sample taken. Follow the above steps to collect a representative sample for quality analysis.

Where Should I Send The Forage Samples For Analyses?

Once you have gone to the effort of correctly collecting a sample, how can you be sure that the results you receive from the testing laboratory are accurate?

Frequently, concerns about laboratory testing focus on the methods used in determining forage quality. However, the focus of concern should be on the accuracy of results and not the technique of obtaining the results. To help you determine if the test results are accurate or not, we have outlined below some questions to ask the laboratory manager.

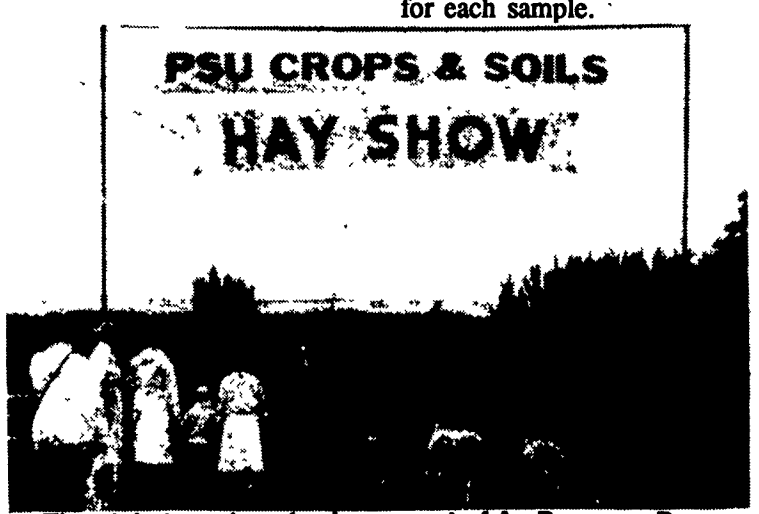
1. Is the lab certified or does it participate in a check-sample program (also called proficiency testing program)? The National Forage Testing Association (NFTA) certification program monitors the performance of a lab against other labs to alert them of potential problems in their accuracy. The American Association of Feed Control Officials conduct a check-sample program that insures consistently and accuracy among participating labs. Involvement in either of these programs indicates that the laboratory is concerned with the accuracy of its results.

2. Does the lab include duplicate samples or quality control check samples in each group of samples analyzed? One of the easiest ways for a laboratory to monitor results is by analyzing replicates of a sample. If the analyses for replicates are not similar, then there is a problem in the testing procedures. In addition, the inclusion of standards or check samples (material of known quality) in each group of samples analyzed can indicate if the analytical procedure is working correctly or not. Standards or check samples can also alert the laboratory technician of small changes in results over time and allow corrective steps to be taken.

3. What analytical methods are used by the laboratory? There is more than one method of analyses for most plant constituents. Laboratories should be using methods of analysis which are well validated and approved by the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists (AOAC).

Laboratories which use NIRS can be asked three additional questions that will help determine if the results are accurate. Like other laboratory methods, NIRS analysis is sophisticated and should be conducted and monitored by trained personnel.

4. How frequently are the NIRS instrument and the calibration equations monitored? NIRS instruments should be monitored by running a check sample daily or after every 25th sample, whichever is more frequent. Calibration equations should be monitored by conducting laboratory analyses on every 25th sample. Again, this additional monitoring adds additional costs which will increase the fee charged for each sample.



The state hay show is always part of Ag Progress Days.

to NIRS? NIRS methods are based on calibrations derived from chemical methods. NIRS labs which have no chemical analytical capability have no method within their lab to monitor the reliability of their calibration equations. It is not impossible for a NIRS-only lab to have a good monitoring program. But it is much more difficult since all of the monitoring samples would have to be sent to another lab for chemical analysis.

6. How does the lab identify and analyze inappropriate samples received for NIRS analysis? Each NIRS calibration is specific for a particular type of sample. For example, corn silage is most accurately analyzed with a calibration equation developed for corn silage and not a calibration equation developed for alfalfa haylage. How does the lab identify samples that are inappropriate for the calibration equation and then does it have a protocol for analyzing these samples?

Keep in mind that laboratory monitoring practices increase the cost of the analysis. Asking these six questions will help evaluate a laboratory and is one way to become more knowledgeable about purchasing analytical services.

Laboratories generally report results of analyses as a single number. This does not mean that hay which tested at 20 percent CP is exactly 20 percent CP. Instead, it means that the hay is 20 percent crude protein plus or minus some variation. The amount of this variation will differ from lab to lab and from method to method. A variation of about 3 percent can be expected between labs for measurements of crude protein. In other words, a hay sample which tested 20 percent CP at one lab would be expected to test anywhere from 19.4 to 20 percent CP at another lab or at the same lab if the analysis was repeated. Variation is usually much higher for fiber measurements than for crude protein measurements.

F.O.4 June Price $12.85

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Rex F. Lothrop recently announced a June 1997 weighted average milk prices of $12.85.

The weighted average differential price was $2.20 per hundredweight and the producer nonfat milk solids price was 74 cents per pound.

The weighted average price was doen 40 cents from may and was $2.21 lower than a year earlier. The producer NFMS price was down 25 cents from last June.

The nonfat milk solids price, applicable to handler payments, was 74.28 cents per pounds for the month, down 25.14 cents from last year.

The gross value of June producer milk, adjusted to 3.5 percent butterfat was $74 million, compared to $69.6 million a year ago.

Mr. Lothrop said that producer receipts totaled 580.4 million pounds during June, an increase of 114.1 million pounds from last June and the average daily delivery of 3,565 pounds per producer increased 378 pounds or 11.9 percent from a year earlier. A total of 5,426 producers supplied Order 4 handlers during the month, an increase of 550 from a year ago. Class I producer milk totaled 237.4 million pounds and was up 38.3 million pounds, or 19.2 percent from last June. Class I milk accounted for 40.90 percent of total producer milk receipts during the month, compared with 42.69 percent in June 1996.

Managing Your Cattle's Feed Supply During Dry Weather

LARRY SWARTZ
County Extension

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — With the drought-like conditions in our area now is the time to consider alternative feeding programs for your livestock. As the dry weather continues, the probable reduction of corn silage tonnage or total loss of silage is becoming a reality. Once the corn leaf ends begin to brown or "fire" the plant will probably not recover. Delaying harvesting will only reduce yield and quality. The yield potential of drought stressed corn is approximately one ton of wet silage per foot of stalk. For example, if you chop corn that is not eared and three feet high; leaving a 12-inch stubble, you can expect two tons of silage per acre. If you need corn silage, check with grain producers in your area to see if you can purchase corn which may not yield grain for them. Pricing drought related corn silage may be difficult. One guideline is that a ton of corn silage is worth approximately six times the current value of one bushel of shelled corn. For example if the price of a bushel of shelled corn is $2.50, then corn silage should be worth approximately $15 per ton.

If you do plan to chop drought stressed corn for silage be aware of elevated nitrate levels. Drought stressed corn plants will continue to uptake nutrients increasing the amount of nitrates in the stalk. Be careful when chopping small stalks and do not chop immediately after a rainfall. You will need to cut the stalk higher than normal as nitrates accumulate in the lower portion of the stalk. Nitrates can be reduced by leaving a 12-inch stubble in the field. High nitrate silage can be used safely if it is diluted with other silages and forages in the ration. Also, by ensiling the nitrate level in the plant will be reduced.

Animals consuming excessive nitrates will break them down to nitrites. These will be absorbed by the animal and may produce harmful effects ranging from increased heart rate and respirations to muscle trembling, staggering and possible death.

Because there are higher levels of nitrates in drought stressed corn, the probability for silo gas increases. When placing corn silage in an upright silo, keep doors between the feed room and barn closed. Be alert for any bleach-like odors or yellowish brown fumes at the base of the silo. Allow a minimum of two weeks after filling before entering the silo and run the silo blower to provide fresh air.

By now you may be asking what are my options? If you have any soybeans planted, consider chopping them for silage when the bean pods begin to form. Keep the length of cut small enough so the course-stemmed stalks are more digestible to the cattle. If the plants are under drought stress, chop before the leaves begin to turn yellow.

Also, now is the time to consider planting emergency crop forages. Some of the crops you may consider planting would be: sudangrass, forage sorghum, sorghum-sudan mix, brassicas and small grains.

If we receive some rainfall by August 15, these crops could be planted to provide some late season forage. The nice feature of these crops is that you can plant them without any additional fertilizer input costs.

If you are planting in a field where triazine herbicides were applied, it is important to know the tolerance of these late season crops. Of the forages mentioned, small grains and brassicas would be the only ones not tolerant to triazine carryover. Check your spray record before deciding what type of late season forage to plant. If you used .75-1 pound of atrazine per acre, you will probably need to plant sorghum or sudex in the corn fields to prevent a carryover problem this year.

If you are considering planting additional forage, now is the time to secure your seed needs. Seed supply for some forages may be low at this time of year.

Also, if you plan to plant brassicas these crops are harvested best through grazing. Planting brassicas in addition to small grains or sudex could extend your forage supplementation into December if there is not snow cover.

For small grains, oats should be a good option. They will grow rapidly and can be harvested for silage after the 1st killing frost this fall. Also, consider planting as much rye as possible this fall. Rye can be grazed once in the fall and again in early spring. Rye makes a good early spring forage that can be established with low input costs.

For those of you who feed hay or are considering your hay needs, now is the time to plan ahead. Hay prices have stayed above average during the summer and will probably continue to increase through fall and winter. Calling around and securing a hay supply would be time well spent. High quality western hay is available and the price including delivery is competitive.

Also, now may be the best time to consider your grain needs for the next year. Since the mid-west appears to be having a good growing season, the fall and winter future prices for beans and corn are favorable. Consider forward pricing your grain and commodity needs to lock in a favorable price position.

Take a current inventory of both your available feed supplies and animals. Try to project the amount of forage and grain needed for the next year. Review your animal inventory, looking for areas where you need to cull harder. Consider using some higher fiber feed by-products in your ration. Also, most feed companies do offer a forage extender product.

With the current conditions it may take a team approach to help your business get through the next six months. Consider meeting with your banker, feed consultant, extension agent, and others who may be able to help make the best management decisions possible for your operation during the next year.

CHARACTERISTICS OF PENNSYLVANIA EGG FARMS: PART 2

Paul H. Patterson
Assistant Professor

This sequel article to the one appearing in Lancaster Farming on Jan. 18 will share more information from the Pennsylvania Egg Farm survey conducted by Eric Lorenz for his master's degree research during the spring and summer of 1996.

The findings serve as benchmarks of the Pennsylvania egg industry's current status with emphasis on the farm, farm manager, and management practices. These results will aid industry leaders and government and university personnel with sound data as they face the challenges of the future.

The majority of producers responding to the survey were from Lancaster County, which contains 46.2 percent of the state's 21.2 million commercial laying hen population (Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture). Lebanon, Franklin, and Dauphin counties rank second, third, and fourth with 7.1, 3.6 and 3.1 percent of the state's hens, respectively. It had been previously reported that the number of contract egg producers (55.1 percent) was approximately 10 percent more than the number of independent producers (44.9 percent).

These two groups of producers differed in their responses to a number of questions. As for the number of years in the egg industry, contract producers averaged 14.9 years versus 28.5 years for independents. Contract producers averaged 1.27 hen houses per farm, while independents had 2.31. The average amount of time spent caring for hens was 1.16 hour per 1,000 hens per week (33,613 hens per 40 hour week), with contract producers spending 1.04 hour and independents 1.40 hour/1,000 hens weekly. Although contractors and independents differ significantly on the amount of labor per 1,000 hens, it may have involved some added labor for washing and grading eggs, which was not meant to be included.

When asked if they had future expansion plans, the majority (88 percent) said no, but a cross-tabulation of the 12 percent that were planning expansions indicated the majority, 62.7 percent, were contract producers. There were several reasons cited against expansion, including dissatisfaction with their current situation, 34.4 percent; poor returns on investment, 20.4 percent; financial limitations, 17.2 percent; the respondents' age, 12.9 percent; and governmental regulations, 6.5 percent. In the past five years, the majority of big ticket purchases (greater than $10,000) were made on watering equipment (21.0 percent). Poultry housing and egg handling equipment purchases were split equally at 19.8 percent.

Because of the urban sprawl taking place in Lancaster and other counties, it was asked if the producers had ever received a nuisance complaint. While the majority had not (71.6 percent), another 28.4 percent indicated that they had. Of those receiving nuisance complaints, most involved flies (71.8 percent), followed by odor (12.8 percent), noise (7.7 percent), and dust (2.6 percent).

A hen house management question included, "What are the determinants for removing manure from the hen house?" More than two-thirds said when they move the hens out (33.7 percent) and when manure is needed as a fertilizer (33.7 percent). Another 12.7 percent said they clean out when the pit is full, followed by increased fly population (7.7 percent) and wet manure (6.6 percent). Another question asked how producers disposed of their moralities. More than fifty percent recycled these by-products by either rendering (38.8 percent), incorporating them into an organic compost (14.1 percent), or mixing them in with the manure (5.9 percent). Another 18.8 percent dispose of dead birds by burial, with 15.3 percent using incineration.

The impact of statewide nutrient management legislation enacted in 1993 was evaluated in another section of the questionnaire. When asked if producers use soil nutrient testing, the majority (81.1 percent) indicated they did and another 69.1 percent had obtained a nutrient analysis of their layer manure. The average farm has 225.2 acres of land suitable to apply manure; however, because of three large layer farms with more than 1,000 acres of land, this average was considerably larger than the median of 130 acres per farm.

During the time producers were surveyed (spring and summer 1996), 46.1 percent had filed a nutrient management plan. When asked their opinion on such plans, only 45.0 percent of the respondents responded that a nutrient management plan would be an adjustment, but a worthwhile effort. Another 53.8 percent did not have a plan, and 55.0 percent agreed with the statement that nutrient management plans presented more problems than they are worth. No one believed nutrient management plans would be a "welcome relief."

The survey explored financial alternatives to address nutrient management, including different tax options. When asked if producers would be willing to pay an increased feed cost to reduce the nutrients excreted by their hens' manure, the majority (77.5 percent) were not willing to pay more. On the other hand, 22 percent were willing to pay some added cost, and of those, 7.5 percent were willing to pay as much as $10 more per ton.

Another hypothetical approach to controlling manure nutrients could be a manure production tax. Egg producers almost unanimously (98.9 percent) opposed the idea of a producer tax to reduce pollution. However, almost three-quarters (72.2 percent) of the respondents agreed with the statement that consumers should pay the additional costs associated with pollution abatement.

The last section of the questionnaire surveyed the opinions of producers regarding several issues facing the egg industry. When queried about the degree of intervention by government in the egg industry, the majority (71 percent) thought there was too much intervention. With regards to public concerns about Salmonella Enteritidis in eggs, 57.9 percent believe the concerns are legitimate and are receiving appropriate attention. Whereas, 40.8 percent believe the concerns are highly exaggerated or unnecessary.

Several open-ended questions asked producers for their opinions on future challenges facing the egg industry. When asked if they had unlimited resources, how would they change their current operation, the majority (60 percent) said they would buy newer automatic equipment. Another 29 percent said they would get out of the egg business, while the smallest percentage (11 percent) said

Combine Shown To Farmers In Shippensburg

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Farmers interested in seeing the performance advantage of Case IH Axial-Flow combine were invited to a combine comparison event sponsored by Chambersburg & Carlisle Farm Service in Shippensburg.

Farm Service hosted the Case IH Axial-Flow Advantage Tour on Tuesday. The demonstration was held at Gro-Lan Farms in Shippensburg.

Mark Bonson, Sales Manager notes that the harvesting efficiency of Axial-Flow combines draws on time-tested field experience. "Since we introduced Axial-Flow combines with rotary technology 20 years ago, we've doubled the capacity and refined grain handling. Now, we clearly offer harvesting efficiency and grain quality advantages," Bonson says.

At the event, dealership personnel and a specific Case field support team demonstrated key Axial-Flow combine features.

The tours are designed to give Case IH customers and prospects a firsthand look at equipment that provides farming solutions. The company plans to show farmers equipment that will improve the efficiency of their production systems.

"Farmers in general, are hands-on people," Jim Irwin, vice president, North American Agriculture Equipment Sales. "Provide an opportunity to compare equipent or get a firsthand look at new technology, and they'll take time from their schedules to do so."

Doing the fundamentals well helps ensure superior performance, and Axial-Flow combines have mastered the fundamentals, says Kelly Kravig, Case's Marketing Manager for Crop Harvesting and Advanced Farming Systems.

In addition to Case IH Axial-Flow combines, Chambersburg & Carlisle Farm Service offers a full line of agricultural equipment, including Magnum, Maxxum, and utility tractor; Early-Riser planters, and other seeding equipment; hay and forage machines; tillage implements and material-handling equipment.

Case Corporation, a leading worldwide designer, manufacturer and distributor of agricultural and construction equipment, is headquartered in Racine, Wis. The company had 1996 revenues of $5.4 billion, and its products are sold through a network of about 4,900 independent dealers and distributors in more than 150 countries.

Kerry English, Case product specialist, presents the Axial-Flow combine to a group of 200 farmers from the four state region of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia.

they would expand their production capacity.

As for the biggest challenges facing the industry, the majority (66 percent) had a common concern for long-term profit potential. There were several underlying issues; most believed that being an egg producer is a low-profit business with overproduction and a poor egg-to-feed price ratio.

According to the respondents, urban sprawl and the news media are real issues of concern facing the industry. The biggest management concern is fly control, followed closely by manure management, which is a primary factor in fly control. Together these two issues accounted for 70 percent of the responses.

Additionally, as managers, they indicated that to produce a quality product it required an efficiently run operation coupled with a major effort.

COME TEST DRIVE A QUINSTAR

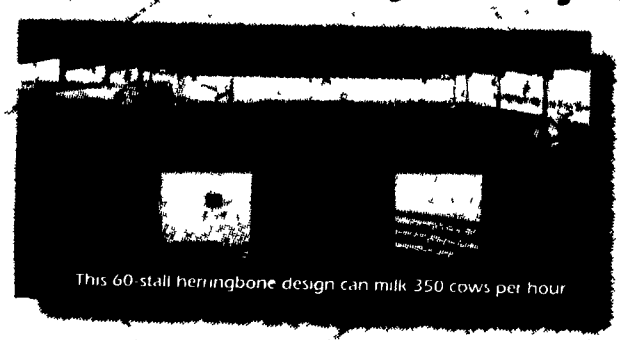
Until genetics improve...

...we've got the best way to milk more cows in less time

New Westfalia Autorotor Carousel Parlor

Most cows per man hour!

The new Westfalia Autorotor Carousel parlor brings cows to the operator on a rotating platform, so one operator can milk more cows in less time without wasted motion. The Westfalia Autorotor Carousel parlor is available in either parallel or herringbone design with cow flow ranging from 75 to more than 450 cows per hour.



This 60-stall herringbone design can milk 350 cows per hour

Easy on the cows

Cows quickly enter and exit, so parlor flow proceeds rapidly and smoothly. The quiet operation keeps cows content for maximum milk let down.

Fast...and durable

The rugged, yet simple design features a heavy duty long life roller carriage system with fewer moving parts than other parlor systems. There are no bearings or pivots to wear out and replace; no assembly welds to break or rust. No cylinders to maintain.

Proven design

Westfalia Autorotor Carousel parlors have been used around the world to increase productivity and reduce labor costs. For more information about the benefits for your operations, see your Westfalia Sales Center or call 1-800-323-6723.

Welcome!

We're so pleased you've chosen to join us for Ag Progress Days. We have a very exciting show this year, with expanded exhibits in a variety of areas and more commercial exhibitors than ever before. This year, the College of Agricultural Sciences Exhibits Building focuses on how Pennsylvania's agricultural producers are competing in a global economy and amid constantly changing consumer preferences. "Pennsylvania Agriculture: A Moving Force in a Changing World" offers a variety of engaging and educational exhibits, as well as an opportunity to interact with Penn State specialists in the field. New precision agriculture demonstrations also are offered this year that showcase the very latest technologies used to help producers compete in today's rapidly changing environment.

Throughout Ag Progress Days, you'll find things that will excite and intrigue you. Two areas of particular interest this year are the new Family Room and ImAGination Station Both feature very special exhibits and activities for families and young people In addition, the equine exhibit area has been improved, our storyteller and SciQ contest offer special shows to capture your imagination and test your knowledge, and the Pasto Agricultural Museum always has new surprises from days of old under its roof In the Tractor Ride-and-Drive area, you can test-drive the newest in yard and garden equipment as well as the industrial strength models. And our experts are on hand throughout the Ag Progress Days site to answer all of your questions

On every street, you'll find new features, new information, and the very latest in goods and services in agriculture From crops, livestock, and farm safety, to forestry and natural resources, lawns and gardens, and families and youth, it's all here. And, as always at this annual celebration of agriculture, there's wonderful food!

Please accept our warmest welcome to Penn State, the College of Agricultural Sciences, and the beautiful Nittany Valley. I hope you have a wonderful day

Robert D. Steele
Dean, Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences

Pennsylvania Agriculture: A Moving Force in a Changing World

Consumers may not be aware of how much agriculture has changed since the 1940s, but we see the results of these changes on the supermarket shelf. Through a series of interactive exhibits, learn how farmers and agricultural companies-and their business practices-have evolved in the last half-century in response to consumer trends and changing markets, both locally and globally; discover how consumer tastes have changed-and how companies have adapted their product development and design to better reach their customers; find out how Pennsylvania companies large and small are tapping into such emerging markets as Asia and Latin America; see how each dollar you spend on food is shared by farmers, processors, and other food-related businesses; and find quick answers to financial questions at a hands-on demonstration of a cutting-edge farm finance computer program. Penn State faculty and staff and representatives from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture will be on hand to answer your questions. Also see a display of College of Agricultural Sciences publications-many of them free-and learn how to participate in the upcoming farm census

AG PROGRESS DAYS TO OPEN AUGUST 12

ROCKSPRING, (Centre Co) - Visitors can take a cutting-edge lawn tractor out for a whirl, participate in a high-tech agricultural quiz show or get a close-up look at insects at Ag Progress Days, sponsored by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, August 12-14

This year's theme, "Pennsylvania Agriculture...A Moving Force in a Changing World," focuses on the economics of Pennsylvania's farms. The event is held at the University's Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rock Springs, near State College.

Several new exhibits will explore the role agriculture plays in Pennsylvania's economy, as well as the opportunities to market Pennsylvania products on a national and international scale. 'While many Pennsylvania companies make money by focusing on local markets, many firms are seeking customers in emerging markets in Europe, Asia and Latin America," says H. Louis Moore, professor of agricultural economics.

At the College Exhibits Building, visitors can learn how farmers and agricultural companies--and their business practices--have evolved over the last 50 years in response to consumer and market trends. In addition, curious consumers can see how each dollar spent on food is shared by farmers, processors and other food-related businesses, and how companies have altered their product development and package design to serve and expand their customer base. A hands-on farm finance demonstration, staffed by Penn State faculty, will crunch the numbers in financial questions using a cutting-edge computer program. Knowledge is the bread of life and visitors to. Ag Progress Days can get a slice of entertainment and information by participating in SciQ, played daily at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the College Exhibits Building Theatre. A special version of the show for children, called SciQ Jr., is played daily at 11 a.m. and Wednesday at 6 p.m. Patterned after television game shows, SciQ is hosted by local radio personalities and contestants are chosen from the audience. Admission is free.

Farm safety is the focus of a live-action demonstration as Penn State agricultural engineers give tips on how to respond quickly to an accident or emergency.

The suburban homeowner or lawn-mowing fans will get a rare chance to test drive a variety of riding lawn mowers at the tractor ride-and-drive area. The popular attraction also gives agricultural professionals a chance to test and compare tractors and other motorized farm equipment from different manufacturers in one location. Non-farmers are welcome to take a tractor or two on a test drive as well.

In the days before motorized tractors, agricultural work was accomplished using strong backs – human and animal. At the Pasto Agricultural Museum, visitors can examine items ranging from a vintage cream separator to an antique potato harvester. Other items on display include cooking pots, scythes, rug-beaters, ice-cutting equipment and egg carriers.

Ag Progress Days' popular Insect Zoo in the new ImAGination Station will feature displays on good bugs and bad bugs, insect pests and such creeping attractions as large lubber grasshoppers, cockroaches and tobacco hornworms.

Storyteller Jan Kinney will perform in the College Exhibits Building Theater every day at noon, creating tales from memory for up to 45 minutes. The Family Room offers visitors demonstrations on using the food pyramid to maintain a healthy diet. In addition, Penn State faculty will offer information on credit, financial management and financial life skills. A special exhibit on nutrition, "Five-A-Day," will be featured this year.

Another exhibit that will appeal to children and their parents is a display sponsored by Penn State's Students for the Responsible Use of Animals. Young calves, lambs, pigs and other livestock will be on display, and Penn State agriculture students will answer questions. Shaver's Creek Environmental Center will show wildlife such as owls, hawks, turtles and snakes at its nearby tent.

Other family-oriented exhibits include horse events, educational displays and food booths offering culinary treats ranging from breaded mushrooms to University Creamery ice cream.

Information on soil bioengineering, woodlot management, grazing and streambank conservation can be found at the Conservation Education Tent on West 11th Street on the Ag Progress Days site. Buses will depart from the tent each day to take visitors on various tours demonstrating conservation techniques.

Bus tours leaving from the corn crib throughout each day will illuminate Penn State's scientific work in potato research, integrated crop management, fruit and vegetable production and many other programs.

There will be free CATA bus service all three days of the exhibition. The shuttle departs from College and Allen Streets (near the Corner Room restaurant) in downtown State College at 9:30 and 11:30 a.m. Aug. 12-14. On August 13, when Ag Progress Days remains open until 8 p.m., there will be an additional departure at 2:30 p.m. Departure times for the return trip are at noon, 3 and 4 p.m. Aug. 12-14, with a 7 p.m. shuttle Aug. 13. Shuttle riders will receive a voucher good for free parking in the Fraser Street and Pugh Street parking garages.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days features more than 500 acres of educational and commercial exhibits. The Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center is located nine miles southwest of State College on Route 45. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, with extended hours on Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Admission and parking are free.

Many different field demonstrations attract visitors to Ag Progress Days. Competing equipment of different makes and models work side by side to create interest in the annual Penn State show. Again more than 300 exhibitors with new machinery, products, and services will provide the support of the show to be held at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center, at Rockspring. The theme, "Pennsylvania Agriculture, A Moving Force in a Changing World," sets the stage for all the activity.

Take A Tractor For A Spin At Ag Progress Days

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — If you're a homeowner or a farmer, and you're in the market for a new lawn or farm tractor, a unique opportunity awaits you at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 12-14.

By visiting the expanded "ride-and-drive" area, you can test drive and compare the latest tractor models from a variety of manufacturers. New to this year's event is a separate lawn and garden tractor ride-and-drive featuring vehicles with less than 35 horsepower that will appeal to homeowners with large yards or farmers looking for equipment to handle small jobs.

"We'll be bringing two manufacturers' full lines of lawn and compact diesel tractors," says Doug Kissell of Keystone Power Equipment in State College, Pa. "The lawn tractors are suitable for mowing suburban yards or around farm homesteads. The compact diesel tractors are useful for part-time or hobby farmers, and for smaller jobs such as mowing, pulling a small spreader or hauling bales of hay."

"The ride-and-drive will give visitors hands-on experience with the latest models," says Joe Nolf of Dunkle and Grief in Centre Hall, Pa. "They'll be able to test-drive a full range of lawn and compact utility models — including those with two-wheel steering, four-wheel steering and various size decks — and compare their maneuverability, serviceability and comfort."

In addition to the tractor ride-and-drive, more than 300 commercial exhibitors will set up displays at Ag Progress Days. Besides tractors and other heavy machinery, their wares range from seed, feed and fertilizer to insurance, consulting services, small power equipment and many other products.

"Visitors can find informaiton on state-of-the-art equipment and cutting-edge techniques, all in one convenient location," says Bob Oberheim, Ag Progress Days manager. "Ag Progress Days is one-stop shopping for farmers."

Several field demonstrations will show new agricultural machinery and techniques in action. Those watching the daily tillage demonstration will see the latest in tractor technology.

"We'll be using a new Quadtrac tractor," says Charlie Hoober of C.B. Hoober and Son in Intercourse, Pa. "Rather than standard wheels, this model has four independent tank-like tracks that permit more ground contact. And that means better traction and maneuverability, a smoother ride and less sil compaction." Hoober says the new Quadtrac line will be in full production in the near future.

Because machinery accidents are the leading cause of farm injuries and deaths, another demonstration will focus on farm safety. Remote-controlled full-scale equipment will undergo mishaps while being operated under typical conditions, showing observers the causes and effects of machinery accidents and how to avoid them.

Other planned field demonstrations will focus on precision farming, including global positioning and geographic information systems and yield monitoring; composting; mowing; round silage baling; and round bale handling.

In addition, various exhibits and workshops will feature information on the latest research-based production techniques, government programs and regulations, and various educational initiatives, ranging from health and safety to forest stewardship.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days features more than 500 acres of educational and commercial exhibits, tours and machinery demonstrations. It is held at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rock Springs, nine miles southwest of State College on Route 45. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, with extended hours of 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday. Admission and parking are free.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 toll-free from July 14 to August 14 or visit the Ag Progress Days on the World Wide Web at www.cas.psu.edu/docs/AGIS/APD/APD.HTML.

PENN STATE'S AG PROGRESS DAYS SHOWCASES PENNSYLVANIA AGRICULTURE'S ECONOMIC STRENGTH

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) - American lives have drastically changed since the 1940s, and so has Pennsylvania's agricultural economy. You can see how the state has adapted its production and marketing of agricultural products over the last 50 years at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, August 12-14.

The College of Agricultural Sciences Exhibits Building, on West 11th Street at the Ag Progress Days site at Rock Springs, will feature "Pennsylvania Agriculture . . . A Moving Force in a Changing World," a series of displays on all aspects of Pennsylvania's farm economy from international markets to farmers markets.

The exhibits will illustrate how various agricultural businesses function and sometimes intertwine to form the state's No. 1 industry. "Pennsylvania's agricultural economy is much more than a farmer selling his crops," says H. Louis Moore, professor of agricultural economics. "The trucker carrying the farmer's crops is part of the picture, as are the food companies that buy the crops, the packaging firms and many other businesses."

The changing face of the state's agriculture will be featured in a historical display showing how two Pennsylvania food processors, Furman Foods and Hatfield Quality Meats Inc., have expanded and changed their business plans and marketing from 1940 to 1990. "Many Pennsylvania companies have grown from small, local operations to vibrant national and regional companies," Moore says.

An exhibit titled "The Changing Faces of Consumers and Markets" will detail how consumer tastes and preferences have changed over time, and how agricultural companies have adapted their product development and design to better reach their customers.

"In 1940, almost all Americans ate fresh chicken, usually purchased whole as fryers or broilers," explains Robert Herrmann, professor of agricultural economics. "These days, consumers can choose between packaged chicken parts, breaded cutlets, skinless chicken or boneless chicken products."

Farmers and other interested visitors will get the chance to see a cutting-edge financial computer program in action at the display "How's Your Bottom Line?" Penn State faculty and staff will demonstrate how to analyze costs, investments and other aspects of farm finance using FINPACK, a specially designed financial analysis program.

Also on display will be "Changing Communities: Living and Working Together," an exploration of how farms and agricultural businesses have adapted as urban and suburban populations expand into what were once rural areas. Another display will detail how federal policies and international trade agreements affect Pennsylvania's business opportunities around the world.

"Marketing Products to the World" is a hands-on demonstration that will show how companies can use the Internet to find new business opportunities both nationally and globally. In addition, there will be a detailed display that breaks down Pennsylvania's agricultural economy using easily understood statistics and illustrations.

The exhibits will include a display titled "A World of Opportunities." The exhibit illustrates how state agencies can help Pennsylvania farmers and businesses reach consumers in emerging markets such as Asia, Europe and Latin America. The Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistical Service also will have an exhibit to show farmers how to participate in the upcoming farm census.

Penn State's Agricultural Information Services will staff a display of College of Agricultural Sciences publications. Visitors can take a variety of free publications and pick up an order form for the college's for-sale publications.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days features more than 500 acres of educational and commercial exhibits. The Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center is located nine miles southwest of State College on Route 45. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, with extended hours on Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Admission and parking are free.

AG PROGRESS DAYS FAMILY ACTIVITIES STEP INTO TECHNOLOGICAL AGE

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. – It's food, fun and learning for young and old alike at the new ImAGination Station at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, August 12-14. This year's exhibits for the younger set have a whole new look that promise kids and adults hours of fun and an introduction to the world of interactive science.

Participants can begin by making their own personal edition of the "ImAGination Station Times," which gives children a chance to have their own computer-generated photo with their favorite bug published at Ag Progress Days. Kids of all ages can come and participate in the following adventures and learn how computers and megabytes are advancing agricultural sciences.

• Plant a "virtual" tree and watch how it will grow over the next twenty years.

• Find out what separates the good bugs from the bad bugs; learn how we can't live without them but are learning to live in balance with them.

• Make your own rain gauge and see what impact weather has on our food supply.

• Explore the science and art of agriculture in your own community through the new and innovative 4-H and FFA programs.

•Use your personal "ImAGination Station Times" as a guide to the ag-related people, activities and places in your county.

Just outside ImAGination Station, animal lovers can enjoy the fuzzy antics of baby animals in the Farm Animal Learning Center sponsored by Students for the Responsible Use of Animals. Shaver's Creek Environmental Center also will display owls, hawks, snakes and turtles outside ImAGination Station. If these two displays aren't enough of an animal fix, visitors can see live llamas and emus in the Dairy and Livestock Tent 2.

Other activities for the younger crowd include Jr. SciQ contest, where participants test their agricultural knowledge in a TV quiz-show format. The game will be played daily at 11 a.m. and Wednesday at 6 p.m. in the College Exhibits Building Theatre.

Award-winning short story author and master storyteller Jan Kinney will regale audiences with daily noon-time performances in the College Exhibits Building Theatre.

The new Family Room exhibit features various displays focusing on issues related to raising children, living within an income and family health.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days features more than 500 acres of educational and commercial exhibits, tours and machinery demonstrations. It is held at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rock Springs, nine miles southwest of State College on Route 45. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, with extended hours of 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday. Admission and parking are free.

Ag Progress Feature Precision Farming

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — When you think of high-tech industries, does farming come to mind? It will, if you attend Penn State's Ag Progress Days, August 12-14. A new precision agriculture demonstration heads the list of production-related attractions at this year's event, says Ag Progress Days manager Bob Oberheim.

"Precision agriculture is a hot topic in the farm community right now, Oberheim says. "By using the latest technology in global positioning systems, geographic information systems and on-board computers in combines and tractors, growers can adjust their management practices to become more efficient."

These technologies can help producers to map variations in crop yields within a single field. "For instance, this information can enable farmers to apply pesticides and fertilizers only where they're needed instead of across an entire field, which saves them money and minimizes environmental impact," Oberheim explains.

Ag Progress Days visitors can attend precision agriculture presentations by Penn State faculty and cooperative extension staff, followed by field demonstrations featuring the technology.

Oberheim says other populra field demonstrations will be back, including no-till vegetable planting, hay mowing, baling, round bale handling and composting.

The focal point of Penn State's Ag Progress Days displays will be the college of Agricultural Sciences Exhibits Building. The building's theme this year will focus on the changing shape of Pennsylvania agriculture. Visitors will see a series of interactive exhibits that will highlight how agriculture — Pennsylvania's number one industry — is adapting to the global marketplace, consumer trends and other business and environmental issues.

Other exhibits, tours and workshops will feature the latest research and information on crops and soils, dairy and livestock production, integrated pest management, conservation practices and woodlot management. More than 300 commercial and noncommercial exhibits also will be on hand to display the newest goods and services.

In addition, a variety of family and consumer-oriented attractions are planned, including new family living exhibits and demonstrations, storytelling, horse exhibitions, and insect zoo, live animal displays, lawn and garden advice, antique exhibits and SciQ, a TV-style game show.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 toll-free from July 14 to August 14 or visit the Ag Progress Days site on the World Wide Web at www.cas.psu.edu/docs/AGIS/APD.HTML.

FAMILY ISSUES HIGHLIGHTED AT 1997 AG PROGRESS DAYS

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. – Fun, education and free stuff await visitors to The Family Room building at Penn State's 1997 Ag Progress Days, August 12-14.

This new exhibits area will stress issues of importance to all Pennsylvania families, such as raising children, making the most of financial resources and maintaining physical and mental health.

"The exhibits and activities in The Family Room will highlight only a few of the many programs Penn State is involved in," says Diane Brown, associate director for cooperative extension in the College of Agricultural Sciences. "Displays will focus on cooperative extension programs designed to strengthen families; enhance the development of children and youth; and build caring, safe and healthy communities."

The Family Room exhibits will include:

- Poison prevention information from the Central Pennsylvania Poison Center. "Mr. Yuk" stickers will be given out.
- Hershey Medical Center's Agromedicine program, a partnership of medical and agricultural professionals to promote the health and safety of farm families, agricultural workers and consumers.
- Eating Right with the Food Guide Pyramid, a display featuring daily demonstrations on selecting and preparing foods in healthy ways.
- Staying Well at Home, Intergenerational Issues, which will provide information for elders and their families about staying well and maintaining independent living.
- Cutting Credit Loss, focusing on techniques that help reduce the cost of using credit cards and other forms of consumer credit.
- Financial Life Skills, an exhibit highlighting basic skills for individuals and families to make financial decisions ranging from organizing records to maintaining a valid will.
- Better Kid Care, an educational and training program for child care providers and parents.
- Exercising Character, an exhibit focusing on moral behavior, values and good citizenship.
- Community Coalitions for Tobacco-free Youth, which will provide information about youth tobacco use, distribute free posters, luggage tags and other gifts, and allow children to pledge not to use tobacco products.
- AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians, an exhibit showcasing information about independent living and inexpensive home modifications for farm workers or family members affected by a disability.
- The Northern Appalachia Leadership Initiative on Cancer, which will offer early detection strategies for breast, cervical, prostate and skin cancer.
- The Pennsylvania Office of Rural Health, which will distribute information about efforts to improve health care services for rural Pennsylvanians.
- Five-A-Day, a display focusing on adults and children nationwide who meet the goals of the Five-A-Day for Better Health Program.
- Healthy Indoor Air for America's Homes, concentrating on research about indoor environmental contamination from carbon monoxide, radon, asbestos, mold, mildew, lead paint and other substances.

Toll-Free IPM Line Connects Growers To Pest Information

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Since 1993, a toll-free, automated telephone information line has helped Pennsylvania crop producers to anticipate pest problems — and in some cases, to reduce pesticide use by up to 50 percent. Now, the help-line is poised to expand by providing growers with information on pesticide applicator training opportunities throughout the state.

The telephone service, 800-PENN-IPM, is maintained by the Pennsylvania Integrated Pest Management (IPM) Program, a partnership between Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. Growers, cooperative extension agents and others who call during the growing season receive up-to-date information about insect and disease development for a variety of crops.

Starting this fall, the service will offer information on regional pesticide applicator training, which is required for receiving or renewing a permit to apply registered pesticides. The weekly updated line will allow users to select specific topics and regions for educational credit information, meeting dates and locations, and contact names and phone numbers.

Addition of the new service is expected to increase the line's growing call volume, says Ed Rajotte, associate professor of entomology and Penn State IPM coordinator. Use of the new line also should be boosted by a new option that allows phone-line users to receive training session schedules or field data on pest activity by fax, Rajotte says.

"I think the pesticide training information is going to save untold dollars and hours of staff that previously were devoted to answering calls about the sessions," says Less Bentz, IPM coordinator for the state agriculture department. If a help-line user needs additional information or assistance, they still can call the Penn State Cooperative Extension office in their county. Information also is available on the IPM World Wide Web site at www.cas.psu.edu/docs.casdept/ipm/index.html.

The pesticide training information will be available on the line from Oct. 1 to March 31. Pest management information — such as type of damage, growing degree days and control tactics — for sweet corn, tomatoes, ornamentals, potatoes and Christmas trees is available from April 1 to Sept. 30.

"Farmers used to apply pesticides based on calendar dates. Now, because of IPM resources, altneratives to pesticides such as biological controls often are chosen," Rajotte says. "If pesticide applications are necessary, their use is determined by more precise factors such as insect activity, temperature and humidity. This saves time, effort and dangerous chemical exposure, while maintaining crop productivity."

By providing this kind of information, the program already has enable some sweet corn growers to reduce their pesticide use by as much as 50 percent without affecting crop quality of quantity. "In the past, IPM was considered a risk, but now insurance companies are beginning to think of IPM as risk management," Rajotte says.

Expansion of the phone line will contribue little to the already minimal cost of maintaining the state agency-funded service. The largest expense for the program was the initial outlay to purchase and set up the system's equipment, but since the expert staff time and resources to maintain the line are donated, its only operating cost is for telephone tolls.

Diagnostic Labs Take Show To Ag Progress Days

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Got fuzzy white stuff growing on your ornamental trees or shrubs? Brown spots dotting your flowers? Instead of trekking to the Penn State University Park campus to consult with experts at the plant disease clinic or the insect identification laboratory, let the experts bring the show to you.

Visitors to the Landscape, Lawn and Garden Tent at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 12-14, can get expert advice on insect, disease and plant problems from College of Agricultural Sciences faculty and Penn State Cooperative Extension county agents. According to Peter Landschoot, associate professor of turfgrass management, the tent features an informal collection of displays by various specialists who will answer lawn and garden questions.

"We usually bring along educational manuals and extension information so that we can give people something to walk away with," Landschoot savs.

"Folks will bring in samples from their trees and shrubs to find out what's wrong and what to do," says Greg Hoover, senior extension entomologist. "The tent's staff will have some basic diagnostic tools, such as hand lenses and reference books, to aid their diagnoses, but if these aren't helpful, homeowners aren't completely out of luck.

"If we can't diagnose a problem at the tent, we will take the person's name, address and phone number and analyze it back in a lab on campus," Hoover adds. "We will call or write to them with advise and management suggestions."

John Peplinksi, coordinator of Penn State's Plant Disease Clinic, says a wide variety of disease samples have been brought to Ag Progress Days for diagnosis over the years. He has been involved with the Landscape, Lawn and Garden Tent since Ag Progress Days was first held at the Rock Srpings site more than 20 years ago.

"The questions vary because different problems occur each year," Peplinski says. "The kinds of insects and diseases we see are a function of many factors, such as temperature, humidity and rainfall."

Ayrshire Is Supreme Champion At Show

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TROY (Bradford Co.) — An Ayrshire rose to the top of the 250 entries in the Troy Fair 4-H and FFA Roundup to be named the grand champion of her breed and the overall supreme champion.

The 5-year-old cow, Bonnieshade JJ Clover, owned by Brian Sharer of Laceyville, captured the coveted award after judges Mary Shanks Creek of Hagerstown, Md. and Paul Knight of Airville examined the grand champions of each breed.

Standing in the reserve grand champion Ayrshire position was Amberleigh Yurkanin's 4-year-old, Laneway Festival's November. Among the junior animals, Locust Lane Trident Sandi, owned by Chris Neville, was named the junior champion, while Samantha Hillyard's Palmyra L.H. Fern stood in the reserve junior champion spot.

In the Brown Swiss show, 4-year-old Elm Brook Trouba Paisley, owned by Heather Yurkanin, took the grand champion honors while Michael Cole's Victory Acres Legacy Alisi, a junior 3-year-old, was named the reserve grand champion.

Among the Brown Swiss heifers, Richard Spencer's Elm Brook Signa Jarine was named the junior champion, while John Yurkanin Jr.'s Elm Brook Signature Gifted was named the reserve junior champion.

In the Holstein ring, Aaron Sheeley's Braund Valley Potential Kel was named the grand champion while Jodi Crawford's Ho-Crawf Chesapeake Lindy was named the reserve junior champion. Among the heifers, David Packard's Pack Herd BC Bazoo was named the junior champion. She was flanked by James Alderfer's Du-Mar Astre Fuchsia, named the reserve junior champion.

Grand champion honors in the Jersey breed were bestowed upon Thomas Noble's Nobledale Jacob Cookie, a 4-year-old. The reserve grand champion of the day was Heather Yurkanin's aged cow, Cindy Lee Milpine. The junior champion Jersey of the day was Martin Watson's Butter Ridge Juno Jade, who was followed by the reserve junior champion, Frosty Valley Imperial Vanessa, owned by Daniel Harkness.

WE HAVE STIR AERATOR TO HELP WITH

FLY & ODOR CONTROL

BIG PERFORMANCE...SMALL PRICE

SIMPLE PROCEDURE: the aerator works directly into the bed of material, forming its own windrow. Windrows can be formed from piles of nearly any size. Alleyways are not required when using the Brown aerator, so there is a great reduction in space requirements. The aerator's reverse rotation works the material from the bottom up, and to the side, assuring complete mixing and agitation. LOW MAINTENANCE: the aerator is a simple design, the principle as a material mover has been proven with over 30 years experience in practical application. The aerator is hydraulically driven and equipped with patented wearplates or paddles, both of which are easily replaced.

Research Dairy Needs Your Donation

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) is encouraging dairymen interested in the future of their industry to make a donation to the new Marshak Dairy at the University of Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine.

The 200-cow barn, the first greenhouse-type barn constructed in Pennsylvania, was dedicated last October with a herd of 50 cows. The facility was built with funding from private donors and the state. Unfortunately, funds were not available to cover the costs of purchasing additional cows.

"If we could get farmers to see it, they'd want to invest," said Mike Evanish, manager of the PFB's MSC Business Services, who toured the facility earlier this eyar. "The barn is state-of-the-art, designed for low investment, low labor and ease of management — and it's done right. You could put this dairy anywhere in Pennsylvania and start making money."

The shell of the building is premanufactured as a solar agriculture building. In summer, the sides can be rolled up for ventilation. The 35,000 square foot facility features an administration area overlooking the milking parlor, four sections of 40 free stalls where cows can lie down on padded mattresses, and space for 48 comfort stalls or tie stalls where each cow can be fed a different mix and monitored for nutritional studies.

The fundamental goal of the Marshak Dairy facility is to "help Pennsylvania's dairy farmers survive in a very difficult economic climate," said Dr. Alan Kelly, Dean of the School of Veterinary Medicine. The dairy serves as a living laboratory for the School and as a teaching site on dairy cattle health, productivity and economics.

With the help of donors including PFB's Pennsylvania Friends of Agriculture Foundation and individual farmers, the dairy is now about halfway toward its goal of a foundation herd of 210 cows, according to David Nelson, Director of Development at the School of Veterinary Medicine. In addition to teaching, the dairy is being used by the Center for Animal Health and Productivity to develop models for research into herd management and development issues which will help the dairy industry become more productive and environmentally-friendly. That's why a large herd is needed to serve as a research control group. "Farmers can visit the dairy for ideas," said Nelson. Visits can be arranged by calling the New Bolton Center at (610) 444-5800 and asking for Dr. Charles Ramberg or Dr. Bill Chalupa.

To complete its foundation herd, the Marshak Dairy is seeking cash donations for dairymen. A cash contribution of $1,500 can be used to purchase a bred heifer. All donations to the foundion herd are tax-deductible and will be recognized on a permanent plaque at the dairy. Gifts made in the memory of a loved on will be so noted.

For details on how to make a tax deductble donation for a heifer at the Marshak Dairy contact David Nelson at (215) 898-1480.

"This is a great opportunity to help complete a research dairy that will play an important role in advancing the dairy industry in Pennsylvania," said Evanish.

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is a voluntary, non-government organization which represents over 25,000 farm and rural families.

AG PROGRESS DAYS OFFERS TIPS ON CONSERVING NATURAL RESOURCES

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. – Visitors to Penn State's Ag Progress Days, August 12-14, can get tips on milk house waste disposal, see model airplane flying demonstrations or learn about forest management at the Conservation Education Tent.

Buses will depart daily from the Conservation Education Tent on West 11th St. to take visitors on various tours demonstrating conservation techniques.

The manure composting tour will run daily at 11:30 a.m. The tour offers information on recycling and composting manure and other materials. In addition, visitors to the Conservation Tent will see a continuous demonstration of how milk house waste can be stored and distributed to a vegetative filtering system that is environmentally safe.

A walking tour concentrating on forestry and wildlife will highlight woodlot management. Topics such as harvesting trees to generate income, forest regeneration and proper woodland management will be addressed. Participants should dress comfortably for this walking tour, which will run hourly from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The wetlands and stream corridor management tour focuses on how stream crossings and streambank fencing can improve natural waterways. Demonstration sites for constructed and restored wetlands also are featured. Buses leave at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

On the agricultural conservation tour, farm operators can learn how conservation practices can protect soil and improve water quality. Crop residue management, contour strip cropping, waterways and water diversions will be covered. Buses will leave daily at 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Model airplane enthusiasts from Pennsylvania's Cumberland County Aeromodelers, a 4-H modeler's club, will demonstrate their flying feats at the Conservation Tent at 10:30 a.m. August 12-14 and at 2:30 p.m. August 12 and 13. About 14 model club members and four adult leaders will fly miniature aircraft built by club members.

Several workshops will be offered daily. The Graziers Workshop gives Pennsylvania farmers the lowdown on managing their pastures for profit and reducing costs. Another workshop, Soil Bioengineering, focuses on using vegetation to solve natural resource problems such as streambank erosion. A variety of conservation education programs are featured daily in the tent, including presentations on pasture management and the use of living cover in crop production.

New York Farm Bureau To Meet In Saratoga Springs

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. — For the first time in the New York Farm Bureau's long history, the annual meeting will take place in the capitol district.

Scheduled for December 1-4 at the Sheraton Saratoga & City Center in Saratoga Springs, the Farm Bureau convention will draw hundreds of farmers from all across the state.

According to Fred Perrin, NYFB organization director, "The primary purpose of the Farm Bureau annual meeting is the adoption of the organization's legislative policy. The resolutions to be considered at the annual meeting were first surfaced by the grassroots members of the organization and then approved at the county level. The delegates at the convention will address over 100 issues of public policy — from budget and tax issues to environmental concerns."

Perrin said that in additon to the policy-making, the annual meeting has activities associated with recognition and entertainment. "Two of the confirmed speakers to date include LaDonna Gatlin, baby sister of country music's famous Gatlin Brothers, and Bruce Vincent of Communities for a Great Northwest, a nationally known speaker on the intelligent use of our natural resources and a fourth generation logger from Libby, Montana.

Starting Plants From Cuttings Is Slice-Of-Life Gardening

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — For most backyard gardeners, the best way to start a plant is to drive to the nearest greenhouse and buy one. However, a scientist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences says savvy plant lovers can save money and have fun by starting their own plants from cuttings.

"The reason plants can take root from cuttings is that each cell in the plant has all the genetic information necessary to produce a complement plant," explains Robert Berghage, assistant professor of horticulture. "When a cutting is taken by snipping a portion of the plant stem, we are removing the connection between the stem and the roots."

As a result, the snipped plant has had its growth patterns are governed by plant hormones produced in the leaves, stems and roots of the plant. Berghage explains that once a cutting is taken, the plant hormones can no longer travel back and forth between the roots and the stem.

"That means there is a change in the balance of hormones within the cutting," Berghage says. "The hormonal change signals the plant to first heal the wound, and then replace the missing roots."

Berghage points out that the healing and rooting process takes time, and gardeners must be vigilant in caring for plant cuttings.

"In its simplest form, cutting production means taking a snip of a plant stem, sticking it in some water, and letting it develop new roots," Berghage says.

Although some plants, such as geranium, coleus, oleander and mint can be propagated using this method, Berghage explains that many other plants requier a few more steps to get them to root.

• Do not let the cutting dry out. The plant has lost its roots, the normal source for water, so gardeners must provide water or reduce the rate of water loss.

• Use a rooting hormone. Applying rooting hormone will speed up the process by reducing the time required to generate the hormonal changes the plant needs to change its growth pattners. "In some plants, a rooting hormone is an absolute requirement for propagation," Berghage says.

• Use a sterile, well-aerated and moist rooting medium. "Sticking a cutting in water prevents it from drying out, but this also restricts the availability of oxygen to the snipped end, which makes it hard for healing and new growth to occur," Berghage says. He recommends using growth media such as vermiculite, perlite, floral foam or a good potting soil to provide water without depleting the cutting's oxygen. Using a sterile medium also prevents disease.

• Provide high humidity and reduced light. Water loss thorugh the leaves can be reduced by raising the humidity around them. Water loss also can be reduced by reducing light levels. "Cover the cuttings with a plastic bag to provide high humidity," advises Berhgage. "If you reduce light levels, just remember you must have enough light for the plant to grow."
